G.O.P. Chiefs Open Debate On Chairman And Platform

Field Is Culled for Man to Head Committee; Kohler Refuses.

Leaders Against Eastern Choice

New Deal Blast Urged, but Caution Rules Chicago Rally.

By Raymond Clapper.

Chicago, June 4.—Republican leaders canvassed the field thoroughly today in search of a man who could be elected National chairman at the party's National Committee meeting tomorrow, but failed to get together on any of the numerous possibilities.

At the same time, party leaders devoted much time to drafting a platform or brief declaration of principles which would stand as the opening blast of the party's effort to make a National comeback.

It is planned to make a broadside attack on the New Deal, but the exact form and the amount of punch to be put into this declaration became a matter of dispute. Old Guard forces were for a broadside declaration, but on behalf of Republican Senators and Congressmen who have voted for New Deal measures and who have to face reelection fights, pressure was brought to phrase the declaration so that they would not be left out on a limb.

Kohler Refuses Job.

Former Gov. Walter J. Kohler, of Wisconsin, was urged to rush to Chicago late today and leaders by long-distance telephone told him they believed his election as chairman would be obtained, but he unequivocally and with finality refused to let his name come before the committee. It is understood he is considering running as the Republican candidate for the Senate against Senator Robert M. La Follette.

Party leaders, baffled in their search, then turned to former Gov. Wilber Marion Brucker of Michigan. But it was said that Senator Arthur Vandenberg and Roy Chapin, Secretary of Commerce under Herbert Hoover, were cool toward Brucker and it was uncertain tonight what strength could be mustered for him.

Brucker is a resident of Lansing. Before entering State politics, he was cited for heroism on a battlefield in France. A graduate of the University of Michigan one year before he went to war, the former Governor returned from abroad and mounted steadily up the barristers' ladder.

He was appointed an assistant

Nitro Charge Wipes Out Survey Party; Three Identified.

Norman, Okla., June 4 (AP).—A terrific explosion of nitroglycerin killed an entrie seismograph party, believed to number seven men, on a section line road eight miles southeast of here late today.

W. C. Berry, a farmer living about a quarter-mile from the scene, said he heard a great explosion and saw the bodies hurtling through the air.

The party was an oil exploration crew of the Sinclair Oil Co.

Tentative identification was made of three of the dead. They were Vernon H. Weddle, a former student at the University of Oklahoma here; "Red" Collier and a man named McClellan.

Exploration for oil by seismographic sounding is a recent development. Soundings are made at various points over an area by the delicate instruments, whose needles draw a geological "tell-tale" path to indicate the nature of formations. After miniature "earthquakes" have been produced artificially by high explosives, the sub-surface structure is said to be fairly well indicated.

Two trucks, one containing high explosives, were at the scene of the explosion.

Army Plane Destroyed When Match Fires Fuel

Cumberland, Md., June 4 (Spl.).—A spectator lighting a match while a single-motor United States Army biplane was being refueled at the Cumberland Airport late this afternoon, caused the destruction of the plane when the gasoline fumes ignited, airport officials said. Harvey Johnson, 19, an employe of the airport, was badly burned and is a patient at Memorial Hospital.

The plane, piloted by Lieut. N. H. Crumley, made a forced landing here several days ago while en route from Washington to Selfridge Field, and a new motor was installed today. The ship had been flown two hours to test the engine and was being refueled when the fire occurred.

Gagged House Votes Billions In Aid, 309-46

Landslide Gives President Power to Spend Cash Without Stint.

Gagged by suspension rules, the House yesterday in 90 minutes clothed the President with power to spend indeterminate billions for emergency relief.

By a landslide vote of 309 to 46, the chamber passed a $1,172,000,000 bill for public works and relief, then authorized the President to draw without check from unobligated RFC and PWA purses.

Republican opponents charged a potential spending power of between $8,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000 for relief, the largest peacetime authorization ever to pass the House.

Only two Democrats feast negative ballots—George Terrell, of Texas, the South's 71-year-old warrior for the Constitution, who consistently has opposed huge Federal outlays, and Edward Moran, of Maine. Moran insisted his party leaders had no right "to deny the right of amendment on a bill so important."

Democrats Almost Solid.

Terrell and Moran voted with 44 Republicans against the deficiency measure, while 43 Republicans and three Farmer-Laborites lined up with 263 Democrats in voting "aye."

Admitting his committee did not attempt to earmark the amount Mr. Roosevelt might spend to feed and clothe the hungry, Appropriations Chairman James P. Buchanan assured his colleagues only $640,000,000 will be laid out by the FERA under the authorization, unless unforeseen emergencies arise.

10-Year Low Mark Set By Stock Mart Trading

New York, June 4 (AP).—Bulls and bears alike continued inactive today as trading in the New York Stock Exchange shriveled to the smallest volume in a decade.

Sales in the stock exchange totaled 357,540 shares, a second low since June 2, 1924. Brokers attributed dullness in part to the transition the financial community is going through in adapting itself to Federal regulations.

Piety Detroit Winner; Third Victory in Row

Detroit, June 4 (AP).—Piety, a filly claimed by C. V. Whitney from A. A. Baroni for $2,500, made it three wins out of three starts today by capturing the winner's end of the $800 Van Dyke purse, feature event at the Detroit Fair Grounds track.

Son Missing, Phone Brings Death Threat

Capital Family Sleepless as Voice Says Body Is Being Sent.

A death threat hovered last night over the home of Policeman Charles G. Thayer, 315 Rittenhouse street northwest, whose son, Nelson, 23, the father of two small children, has been missing since Saturday night.

"We're sending you your son's body," said a man's voice over the telephone to Mrs. Thayer early yesterday. "You never will see him alive again."

The telephone message, which has been traced to a pay station in Baltimore, climaxed a second sleepless night for the Thayers. Nelson, who was a truck driver for the Hilltop Market in the 5000 block of Georgia avenue, lived with his father and mother, wife and children at the Rittenhouse street address.

Leaving the store where he has been employed four years Saturday night, young Thayer went home, greeted his family and unloaded some groceries from a new automobile he just had purchased. After chatting with his wife for a short while he told her he was going out for about half an hour.

"We thought he might be going to get a shave, because we'd been kidding him about it and he needed one," his father said yesterday. "Then, again, he may have gone for a pack of cigarettes."

When Thayer drove away in his new car he dropped from sight. No word was heard of him until the ominous telephone message at dawn yesterday. It came as the elder Thayer was stretched across the bed and his wife was sitting in a rocking chair, while the missing man's wife, Mrs. Helen Thayer, was

Trio in D.C. Gang Seized; 1 Shot, Dying

2 Men and Woman Aid Taken by Raiders in Baltimore.

Tip From Slain Bandit's Sweetheart Leads to Capture.

Climaxing a chase by police in Baltimore yesterday, in which he and a male companion leaped from an automobile and sought safety in a wooded section, Robert Mais, 28, listed as a member of a gang of seven wanted for numerous crimes in Washington and nearby territory, was shot six times and last night was reported near death in a Baltimore hospital.

Mais' companion, identified as William Davis, 40, and listed by the Postoffice Department as a member of the gang, raised his hands and surrendered as Mais fell before the fire of Justice Department agents and Baltimore city and county police.

Physicians at the Baltimore hospital said late yesterday that Mais' only chance to live long enough to be questioned depended upon blood transfusions. A policeman volunteered to supply blood for the first transfusion, Baltimore dispatches said.

The capture of Mais and Davis also led to the jailing of Marie McKeever, 34, another alleged member of the gang.

The gang, including five men and two women, is wanted here particularly in connection with the Union Station mail truck robbery and the wounding of the guard last December 5, and Mais is wanted in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Elizabeth Fontaine, 31, in Upper Darby, Pa.

Caught on Woman's Tip.

It was a tip from Mrs. Fontaine, admitted sweetheart of Bill Phillips, slain leader of the so-called Meadows gang, which landed the three members of the alleged robbery band in the toils of the law.

Mais, Davis and the McKeever woman had been occupying a cottage near the Curtiss-Wright Airfield on the outskirts of Baltimore. The cottage had been under surveillance since Saturday.

Yesterday, while the officers waited in ambush, Mais and Davis drove up in an automobile. Mais' reply to a demand to surrender was to step on the gas. The police pursued the fleeing car and a fusillade of bullets punctured a rear tire. Mais and Davis then leaped from the car and dashed toward the wood. After a few steps Mais fell.

Missing Agent Found Dazed

Towson Man Tells How Assailant Beat Him Over Head.

Baltimore, June 4 (Spl.).—Dazed and weak from four severe scalp wounds, Rudolph A. Miller, station agent at Towson who had been missing since Thursday, was found today near Cowenton, 12 miles from his home.

Miller was unable to talk connectedly to police, and could give only a partial account of what happened to him. Questioned at the Towson police station, he said a short, burly man attacked him in the railroad station Wednesday night.

"I was working at my desk when I heard some one behind me," Miller said. "As I turned around, the man struck me on the head. I tried to fight him, and he struck me again and again. I don't know how many times he hit me.

"When I revived, I was in a clump of bushes near Cowenton. I don't know how I got there, and I couldn't remember what had happened following my fight with the man. I couldn't remember my name, but I was hungry and a woman gave me a sandwich. That was yesterday, I think."

Police believe Miller was kidnaped in an auto after his assailant had ransacked the railroad station. More than $200 was missing from the station cash drawer.

Miller was found by his son and a party of neighbors after a woman had telephoned from Cowenton that she believed she had recognized Miller. He was taken to his home, treated, and later removed to the police station for questioning.

Flier and Sister Killed After Church Conclave

Highland, Kans., June 4 (AP).—Edwin S. Olson, 25, and his sister, Eline Ruth Olson, 18, St. Louis, crashed to their death near here today while flying home from a Nebraska church conference.

Olson was piloting the plane, which had been constructed from parts of several wrecked ships. Farmers said the motor appeared to falter and the ship behaved crazily for several minutes before it fell.

Drought Aid Plan Pushed Despite Rain

White House Conference Scheduled Today on Problem.

Three States Get Heavy Downpours; Showers Fall in Others.

While rain was reported to have fallen in sections of the sun-parched Middle West yesterday, President Roosevelt and Administration leaders moved to get their relief plans under way in the drought area.

The Weather Bureau here announced that heavy rain fell in Minnesota and North and South Dakota. Light showers aided in relieving the heat in parts of Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska and Kansas.

In no section, however, was the rainfall sufficient to make more than a water-hole puddle for cattle. It also was of little benefit to grain, according to reports.

President Roosevelt yesterday summoned Congressional leaders from the 15 drought States to a conference at the White House today.

To Attend Parley.

The President invited members of the Congressional delegations from Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas and Arizona.

Following a parley with Mr. Roosevelt and other leaders, Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins allotted $2,200,000 to eight drought States for immediate work relief for 156,000 farmers.

With Hopkins at the White House were William Meyers, of the Farm Credit Administration; Chester C. Davis, Farm Administrator, and Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Agricultural Secretary.

Hopkins declared more money would be granted "almost hourly" to aid the work program in afflicted States.

He added that his relief organization would concentrate on providing work for farmers so they could earn money to purchase food for their cattle and themselves. He said that 50,000 farmers already had been started on various work projects, and that by the week-end 100,000 would be at paying jobs.

Whether the 24-hour work week of the Civil Works Administration will be enforced depends on how much farmers can earn on the program he said. Many abandoned civil works projects will be revived to furnish employment, although Hopkins said only the best projects would be used.

More Counties.

Meantime, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, after scanning reports from its representatives in the field, added Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and Oklahoma to the drought belt. In doing so officials added 26 more counties to the emergency drought list. "Secondary emergency" areas also were designated to 103 other counties in 12 States.

Farm Administration officials said the drought would reduce the wheat crop to about 565,000,000 bushels. With the present carryover of 260,000,000 bushels, that supply would still keep the supply about 200,000,000 bushels over domestic needs. Considerable withering of the corn crop will bring heavy marketings of lightweight hogs, the Farm Administration said.

In addition, they said the drought will bring release of corn stored

Five Are Killed In Car Crash

Cars Collide Near Bluff City, Tenn.; Two Badly Hurt.

Bristol, Tenn., June 4 (Spl.).—Five persons were killed in a collision of two automobiles 4 miles south of Bluff City, Tenn., today.

The dead: Mrs. James B. Cox, of Johnson City, Tenn.; Mrs. Hunter Mann, Johnson City, Tenn., daughter of Mrs. Cox; Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Musser, of Belfonte, Pa., and their daughter, Mrs. Frank P. Kellar.

Two daughters of Mrs. Kellar, Katherine and Audrey, were injured critically. They are at a Johnson City hospital.

Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Kellar were en route to Johnson City after visiting friends in Bristol. The Pennsylvania party was en route to Bristol from Johnson City, returning from a Southern tour.

The two machines collided headon when the car driven by Mrs. Cox blew the left front tire.

Mrs. Cox and Mr. Musser were killed outright. The others died shortly after arrival at the Goss Hospital in Johnson City.

Mrs. Cox was the mother of Mrs. Mann, the sister of Mrs. E. Munsey Slack, wife of the Bristol newspaper publisher.

Frost Ruins Corn; Wheat and Fruit Hurt

Lancaster, Ohio, June 4 (AP).—A severe frost today ruined the corn crop and caused severe damage to wheat and fruit hereabouts.

A blazing sun soon dissipated the frost, but as it did the corn wilted and fell.

Slayers Hunted as Body of Boy, Buried Alive, Is Found in Cave

Philippi, W. Va., June 4 (AP).—Spurred by evidence that Dale Janes, 15-year-old schoolboy, was brutally beaten and then buried alive in a bleak cavern, police tonight sought clews to the mysterious killing in the highlands near here.

The body was found by a posse beneath a covering of stones and leaves yesterday.

Prosecutor Forrest Poling said two men, one a former convict and the other a former inmate of the Weston State Hospital, have been arrested.

The youth disappeared Sunday night a week ago while en route home from a church about 5 miles from here.

Poling said Janes could not have fallen into the cavern accidentally and that the position of the body and the stones convinced him the youth had been thrown in and covered up while still alive.

"The coroner has returned an open verdict on my recommendation," said the prosecutor. "There is a gash on the forehead and it appears the boy was attacked, lost consciousness and then was buried alive.

"Examination of the body shows that he did not die for a considerable period after he had been stuck in the cavern."

The cave, about ten feet deep and on the side of a rugged hill, is only a mile from the home of Janes' grandmother, Mrs. Barbara Hoffman, with whom he lived.

The youth was graduated from the eighth grade at the public school only recently and had lived with Mrs. Hoffman since his mother's death several years ago.

While authorities still were unable to decide upon a motive, the prosecutor declared "there were reports Janes had discovered a big still and had been threatened."

Britain Refuses to Pay U. S. Debt Installment Pending Revised Plan

New Element 'No. 93' May Re-Create World

Italian Savant Tells Distinguished Lincei Academy Audience of Discovery Through Bombarding Neculi of Uranium With Netuprons.

Rome, June 4 (AP).—Discovery of a new element, known as "No. 93," which was artificially created from uranium, was reported to the Italian Lincei Academy today by Senator Mario Corbino, who saw in the accomplishment evidence that the world will grow young again and its materials will be renewed.

The discovery was made, he said, by Enrico Fermi, member of the Academy, through bombarding neculi of uranium with netuprons.

"Uranium after having absorbed neutrons converted itself rapidly through emissions of electrons into an element placed immediately higher in the series, that is, a new element, bearing the No. 93," said Corbino.

Corbino told his distinguished audience, which included King Victor Emmanuel, that "the study of the nucleus, now in its beginning, aims at the plan of giving back to the earth the youthfulness of its materials."

"One can now affirm," he declared, "this ambitious design has been converted into reality."

Fermi's discovery, he added, "is in effect a manifestation of new youth communicated by neculear collision to old established material."

The new element was described as the hardest element known to man, and Corbino emphasized the importance of its discovery and the method employed.

"Since uranium was found," he continued, "discoveries of new elements had the effect of filling up vacancies among simple bodies between the extremes of No. 1, hydrogen, and No. 92, uranium.

"In the case of the new element, 93, however, we deal instead with

Right to Recover Contracts Denied Airlines by Decision.

Holding that the "due process of law" clause of the Constitution was not violated by Postmaster General James A. Farley when he issued an order February 9 cancelling all air-mail contracts, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday dismissed suits brought by four major airlines to compel reinstatement of their contracts to carry the mails.

The decision came at the end of argument between lawyers representing the airlines and those representing the Government. William J. Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General and chief counsel for the airlines, said he would seek an immediate appeal.

In his ruling, Justice O'Donoghue held that there were five chief legal obstacles to the relief sought by the air-mail operators, who were the Boeing Air Transport, National Air Transport, Pacific Air Transport and the Varney Air Transport.

Suit Against Government.

He said, first, that that suit was, in effect, a suit against the United States Government, against which there is a Constitutoinal prohibition, unless the United States consents. He pointed out there had been no such consent.

Secondly, Justice O'Donoghue held that the suits involved the handling of the United States mails, which was an exclusive function of the Government. The third ground for dismissing the four suits was that the damages, if any, that arose from the cancellation of the con-

Senate Votes Tariff Trade Bill, 57 to 33

Republicans, in Hopeless Minority, Keep It in Debate 3 Weeks.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday was assured a free hand to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with the world when the Senate, by the overwhelming vote of 57 to 33, approved a bill empowering him to change tariff rates by 50 per cent in making such pacts.

Desired by the President since he entered the White House 15 months ago, this power was voted to him after Senate Republicans, although in a hopeless minority, kept the bill under debate for almost three weeks. Not a change was made in the measure over the opposition of the Democratic leaders.

The bill passed by the Senate contains several changes in the House version of the measure and consequently must go back to the latter body for concurrence. Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Finance Committee, in charge of the bill, announced, however, he expected the House to concur without a conference, with final enactment of the bill within this week.

President Has Clear Field Now.

The bill was designed to clothe the President with power to agree with other nations in the lowering or elimination of trade barriers, with the ultimate object of revitalizing the emaciated foreign commerce of the United States. It is now up to the President to demonstrate the worth of his theory that foreign trade has languished be-

Heat Wave or No, Court Says Nudists Must Wear Shorts

Lansing, Mich., June 4 (AP).—Heat wave or no heat wave, the members of Fred C. Ring's nudist colony near Allegan, Mich., probably will continue to wear shorts.

Such a likelihood was seen today following the ruling of the Michigan Supreme Court that a nudist camp is neither the nudist's home nor his castle, and can not claim the Constitutional protection against search and seizure.

The supreme court ruling was in answer to Ring's appeal from a 60-day jail term and a $300 fine to which he was sentenced in the Allegan County Circuit Court last year, following his conviction on a charge of indecent exposure growing out of his operation of the nudist camp last summer.

The nudist camp is in operation again this summer, but Ring said the members would wear shorts, at least until his appeal to the high court was decided. Last year, following his conviction, Ring indicated he might carry his fight beyond the State Supreme Court if necessary. Whether he planned any such action in the light of today's decision was not immediately learned.

In denying Ring's appeal today, the supreme court stated:

"The appellant in his brief submits a clear question: Is one who, on his own property, privately goes without clothing in the presence of persons whose sense of decency, propriety and morality is not offended, guilty of violation of the law? We answer, in light of the facts presented us, yes. It is clearly shown the appellant designedly made open exposure of his person and that of others in a manner offensive to the people of the State. Instinctive modesty, human decency and natural self-respect require that the person customarily be kept covered in the presence of others."

Remittances Suspended Following Ban on 'Token.'

Johnson Reprisal Act Given Blame

London's Note Points to Default Stigma Certainty.

By Elliott Thurston.

Because of the hopeless outlook for rationalizing the debt issue at this time and in view of the default stigma which the Johnson act would apply to her even if she made another "token" payment, England has suspended all payments.

The British government informed Secretary of State Hull by note yesterday that they were "reluctantly compelled" to suspend all "further payments until it becomes possible to discuss an ultimate settlement of intergovernmental war debts with a reasonable prospect of agreement."

The note emphasized that there was "no intention of repudiating" the obligations and that the British government "will be prepared to enter upon further discussion of the subject at any time when in the opinion of the President such discussion would be likely to produce results of value."

Cost Put at $40,000,000.

Thus ends another phase of the aging, vexing debt controversy. Some State Department authorities ruefully estimate that the Johnson act will cost the Treasury upward of $40,000,000, since it removed the last reason for the British to make at least part payments.

The note, signed by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, said that the British Government "would have been quite prepared to make a further payment on June 15 in acknowledgment of the debt and without prejudice to their right again to present the case or its readjustment, on the assumption that they would again have received the President's declaration that he would not consider them in default."

"They understand, however," added the note with reference to the Johnson act, "that in consequence of recent legislation no such declaration would now be possible, and if this be the case the procedure adopted by common agreement in 1933 is no longer practicable."

France Due to Follow.

France is expected to follow the British example. The French suspended payments before but there

Convict Slain, 3 Shot in Break

Prisoners Fight Pitched Battle With Guards; 11 of 12 Caught.

Parchman, Miss., June 4 (AP).—One convict was shot to death and three others were wounded seriously today in a pitched gun battle with prison guards after a wholesale break, in which 12 white prisoners took part.

Eleven of the 12 were recaptured shortly after the break and prison officials expressed confidence the twelfth would be apprehended before morning.

Four Texas Convicts Flee in Guard's Car

Harlem State Prison Farm, Fort Bend County, Tex., June 4 (AP).—Four convicts escaped from a prison work squad here late today and fled in a guard's automobile toward Houston.

One of the convicts was believed to have been wounded as guards fired several shots into the fleeing automobile.

Capt. A. N. Owens, farm manager, headed a posse in pursuit.

The fugitives were identified as Frank Collins, serving 25 years for murder; Jim Lucas, serving 15 years for robbery; Odett McHughes, serving 9 years for burglary, and George Wright, serving 4 years for theft.

Prince Plans to Set Up Japanese Culture Chair

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Establishment of a chair of Japanese culture at some American university, His Excellency Prince Fumimaro Konoye, president of the Japanese House of Peers, said today, was one of the ultimate objects of his two-month visit to the United States.

The Prince departed for New York, where he will visit two days before going to Washington for further conversations and an informal luncheon with President Roosevelt June 8.

Roosevelt Asks Congress Pass Full Program

Adjournment Is Delayed Indefinitely by His Demands.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Adjournment of Congress was delayed indefinitely yesterday when President Roosevelt, in conference with Democratic leaders of both Houses, expressed the wish that most of the important Administration bills still before Congress be adopted before the legislators leave town.

This attitude of the President, in declining to ditch any of the half-dozen measures the Administration regards as essential to its general program, added at least another fortnight to Congress, and many believe if he adheres to this policy the session might be prolonged until late this month.

Back on the list of legislation the White House is particularly anxious to have approved went such highly controversial measures as the Wagner labor disputes bill. This measure still is in its legislative infancy, which also is the status of the housing bill, included in the proposed legislation the President refuses to surrender.

Uncertainty Holds.

Although Mr. Roosevelt summoned Congressional leaders for a comprehensive survey of the legislative situation immediately upon returning to Washington yesterday morning, the conference apparently did little to clear the air of uncertainty that clouds much of the program.

The impression prevailed that the President told the leaders merely that he would like to see all of the important bills passed, that he declined to make a decision on shelving any of them, and that, finally, he would set no certain date as a goal for adjournment. Among the bills still on the program, therefore, are:

The Wagner labor bill, the housing bill, the silver bill, the tariff bill, the relief bill, and possibly the measures to provide oil production control and to strengthen sections of the agricultural adjustment act. Spokesmen were uncertain as to the latter two.

Leaders Attending.

The White House conference was attended by Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader of the Senate Speaker Henry T. Rainey and Representative Joseph W. Byrns, House floor leader. They agreed generally that adjournment this week is out of the question, but expressed the hope that by hard work Congress could get through by June 16.

After the meeting, however, the White House explained that most of the important bills had been discussed but that the list enumerated by the conferees should not be taken as all the bills the President wants passed. What additional measures Mr. Roosevelt has in mind were not named, although they may include some action for drought relief.

Declining to speculate on adjournment, Senator Robinson said that "amendments to the AAA and the oil bill may have to go over until next session." He added, however, that he expects the appointment of Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell as undersecretary of Agriculture, a promotion that is bound to mean debate, to be confirmed at this session.

Up to Senate.

Speaker Rainey said that both the oil and AAA bills are considered important and that an effort will be made to pass all the measures. Byrns emphasized that "the Senate holds the key to the situation," since the House already has taken action on most of the bills and is prepared to push through the others under a drastic rule.

The House yesterday passed the $1,272,000,000 relief bill and the bill imposing Federal regulation on the commodity exchanges. It also has approved the tariff and silver bills, but has not had oportunity on the oil, AAA, housing or Wagner labor bills.

On the other side of the Capitol, the Senate yesterday passed the tariff bill, which now goes to conference, but had taken no action on any of the other measures. Although the relief and silver bills are expected to get by without much trouble, leaders fear the remaining legislation would tie up that branch of Congress indefinitely.

Most Controversial Bills.

Most controversial of the bills are the AAA amendments and the Wagner measure, which would set up a National labor board to enforce collective bargaining. It is supported by organized labor, but is opposed strongly by such organizations as the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers.

A suggestion of further legislation was made by President Roosevelt in a message to Congress late in the day. Before adjournment he said he expects to present Congress, besides his report on water usage transmitted yesterday, "two other subjects also relating to human welfare and security."

This remark was connected with a statement by Senator Robinson forecasting a message on drought relief, and a statement by Representative Byrns forecasting a message on "social legislation." Byrns said, however, that earlier plans for a joint congressional study of social legislation have been given up.

For fear of filibuster tactics, Senator Robinson declined to say in what order the bills will be taken up in the Senate. He explained that some opponents of the Wagner bill had consumed much of the time devoted to the tariff bill. It was apparent, however, that further conferences must be held at the White House to work out procedure.

Maj. Price's Funeral Today.

Funeral services for Maj. Jackson Price, Engineer Reserve, will be held today at 3 p. m. with full military honors from the Fort Myer Chapel of Arlington National Cemetery.

British Note Suspending Debt Payments

The text of the British note notifying the Secretary of State of the British Government's decision to "suspend" all further debt payments, in view of the Johnson act, until such time as "discussion would be likely to produce results of value," follows:

"British Embassy,
Washington, D. C.
June 4, 1934.

"Sir:

"In their note of December 1, 1932, his majesty's government gave a full statement of the reasons which convinced them that the existing system of intergovernmental war debt obligations had broken down. They pointed out the difference between these war debt obligations and normal credit operations for development purposes: they showed the economic impossibility of making transfers on the scale required by these obligations and the disastrous effect which any further attempt to do so would have on trade and prices. They emphasized the sacrifices whith the British nation had made in this matter and the injustice of the difference between their funding settlement and those accorded to other debtors. They concluded that a revision of the existing settlements was essential in the interests of world revival and they urged that further payments should be postponed pending such a revision. Nothing that has since occurred has led his majesty's government in the United Kingdom to change the views they then expressed.

"2. That the present settlement imposes upon the people of the United Kingdom a burden which is both unreasonable in itself and inequitable in relation to the treatment accorded to other countries may be clearly seen from the following figures.

"In respect of the war advances totaling $4,277,000,000 payments totaling $2,025,000,000 have been made up to date by his majesty's government to the United States Government. Yet despite these payments the nominal amount of the debt still outstanding as at June 15, 1934, amounts to $4,713,785,000.

"Meanwhile in respect of war advances totalling $5,773,300,000 made by the United States Government to other European governments, aggregate payments made up to date amount to only $678,500,000. Thus though the war advances to these other governments exceed by one quarter the advances made to the United Kingdom, payments made by the United Kingdom amount to three times what the United States Government has received from those other powers.

"On the other hand His Majesty's government are creditors as well as debtors in respect of these intergovernmental obligations. While as stated above they borrowed $4,277,000,000 from the United States, they themselves made war advances to the allied governments totalling £1,600,000,000 ($7,800,000,000 at par). These loans were raised by His Majestey's government from the people of the United Kingdom and the annual interest thereon, and eventually their capital repayment, must, in the absence of payments by debtor governments, be met out of the general taxation of their own people. In this respect the position of the United Kingdom is precisely similar to that of the United States; but whereas the United States have received very substantial payments against the domestic charges involved, His Majesty's government have had to meet the domestic charges of their war loans to allied governments in full, as they have paid over to the United States Government all that they have received both from war debts and war reparations, and they have in addition paid nearly as much again out of their own resources.

British Burden Cited.

"If the United States feel the burden of their war advances of $10,050,000,000, against which they have received $2,703,600,000, how much heavier is the burden of the United Kingdom, which with one-third of the population of the United States has had to meet the full charges on its war advances of $7,800,000,000 without any net receipts against these charges, and has in addition made large payments out of its own resources on account of its war debt to the United States.

"None the less, convinced that any resumption of payments on the past scale could not but intensify the world crisis and might provoke financial and economic chaos, His Majesty's Government have suspended their claims on their debtors in the hope that a general revision of these intergovernmental obligations may be effected in the interest of world recovery. But it would be impossible for them to contemplate a situation in which they would be called on to honor in full their war obligations to others while continuing to suspend all demands for payment of war obligations due to them.

"3. The improvement which has taken place in the budgetary situation of the United Kingdom in no way invalidates this conclusion. This improvement is due entirely to unprecedented sacrifices made by the people of this country. Since the war they have been carrying a burden of indebtedness amounting to approximately £8,000,000,000 ($40,000,000,000) or £178 ($850) per head of their population, about one-fifth of which represents war loans made to allied governments. They have balanced their budget and even realized a surplus by the painful process of reducing expenditure and increasing taxation.

"For 15 years they have been paying taxation on a scale for which it would be hard to find a parallel elsewhere. During the whole of this period the burden of taxation has been higher in the United Kingdom, and for a considerable part of the period twice as high as in the United States, including all Federal, State and local taxation. This taxation amounting to close on one-quarter of the national income has aggravated the depression over a long period and the necessity of maintaining an army of unemployed resulting from this depression has constituted a formidable problem to the national finances ever since the war ended. Yet in order to restore the national credit in 1931, the people of the United Kingdom accepted further and heavy increases in taxation, accompanied by rigorous control of expenditure, and cuts in salaries and allowances of all kinds; and despite all these measures the budget would have again shown a deficit last year had it not been possible to secure by the conversion operation carried through in 1932 a reduction in the rate of interest paid on a large proportion of the public debt. This reduction has enabled his majesty's government to remit a part of the emergency sacrifices imposed in 1931 and to restore part of the cuts on salaries and the whole cut in unemployment allowances, the continuance of which was imposing a severe strain on the national conscience. It would have been a gross act of social injustice to have denied this relief to the people of this country in order to pay war debts to the United States while suspending war debt payments due to the United Kingdom.

Problem of Exchange.

"4. But although it is desirable that the internal budgetary position of this country should not be misunderstood, it is really irrelevant to the question of inter-governmental debt, the payment of which has to be related to the balance of trade and not to the volume of internal revenue. The revenues of the United Kingdom are sterling revenues, whereas the debt payments to America have to be made in dollars or in gold. In order to secure the means to pay, therefore, any sums available in sterling would have to be transferred across the exchange. The attempt to transfer amounts of this magnitude would as its immediate effect cause a sharp depreciation of sterling against the dollar, which as His Majesty's government understand would not be consistent with the monetary policy of the United States Government. And in the long run such international transfers would be impossible without a radical alteration in the economic policies of the United States. Payment of debts implies the willingness of the creditor to accept goods and services sufficient to cover the debts due to him over and above the goods and services required to cover his exports: and to make it possible for the United States to receive payment of their claims, it would be necessary to effect a complete reversal of the existing favorable balance of trade between their country and the rest of the world. In the case of the United Kingdom the blance of trade is heavily unfavorable, and the balance of accounts is not such that His Majesty's government could contemplate the transfer of any substantial sum across the exchange, unless it was compensated by equivalent recipts from the foreign debts of this country. If this were done sterling would not be affected by the payments to America, but the burden would be thrown on the currencies of the European debtor countries, thereby aggravating the present crisis, which it is the object of both the United States and His Majesty's government to alleviate.

"5. Thus the question of the British war debt is only a part of the wider question of intergovernmental obligations resulting from the World War. As has already been pointed out, the United Kingdom, while it was a debtor to the United States, was itself a creditor for larger amounts from France, Italy, and other ex-allied powers in respect of war debts, and these in turn are cocreditors with the United Kingdom of Germany in respect of reparations. These intergovernmental debts, as stated in the British note of December 1, 1931, are radically different from commercial loans raised by foreign governments on the markets for productive purposes. War debts are neither productive nor self-liquidating, and the unnatural transfers required for their payment would involve a general collapse of normal international exchange and credit operations. The Administration of the United States under President Hoover recognized this fact and initiated a moratorium on intergovernmental payments in 1931 in order to avert an immediate collapse. But the moratorium of 1931 caused another change in the situation; it made any resumption of the preexisting reparation and war-debt settlements impossible, and the revision of reparations embodied in the Lausanne agreement was made subject to conclusion of a subsequent agreement for the revision of war debts.

Negotiations Recalled.

"6. It was with these facts in mind that His Majesty's government approached the United States Government in their note of December 7 welcomed their suggestion for a close examination between the two countries of the whole subject. After this exchange of notes His Majesty's government paid the installment due on December 15, 1932, in gold, explaining that this payment was not to be regarded as a resumption of the annual payments contemplated by the existing agreement, and that it was made because there had not been time for discussion with regard to that agreement to take place, and because the United States Government had stated that in their opinion such a payment would greatly increase the prospects of a satisfactory approach to the whole problem. In accordance with the arrangement then made, discussions took place first in the spring and later in the autumn of last year between representatives of the two countries, and His Majesty's government appreciate the sympathetic manner in which their representatives were listened to. But on both occasions is was found impossible to arrive at a settlement acceptable to the two governments in face of the unprecedented state of world economic and financial conditions. Accordingly the discussions were adjourned and on June 15, and December 15, 1933, His Majesty's government made token payments in acknowledgment of the debt and the President expressed the personal view that he would not regard His Majesty's government as in default.

"7. In their note of November 6 last His Majesty's government expressed their readiness to resume negotiations on the general question whenever, after consultation with the President, it might appear that this could usefully be done, and His Majesty's government are glad to note that the President in his message to Congress on June 1 has again stated that each of the debtor governments concerned has full and free opportunity to discuss this problem with the Government of the United States. But, unfortunately, recent events have shown that discussions on the whole question with a view to a final settlement can not at present usefully be renewed. In these circumstances His Majesty's government would have been quite prepared to make a further payment on June 15 in acknowledgment of the debt and without prejudice to their right again to present the case of its readjustment, on the assumption that they would again have received the President's declaration that he would not consider them in default. They understand, however, that in consequence of recent legislation no such declaration would now be possible, and if this be the case the procedure adopted by common agreement in 1933 is no longer practicable.

"8. His Majesty's government are in fact faced with a choice between only two alternatives, viz., to pay in full the sum of $262,000,000, as set forth in the communication from the United States Treasury, dated May 25, or to suspend all interim payments pending a final revision of the settlement, which has been delayed by events beyond the control of the two governments. Deeply as they regret the circumstances which have forced them to take such a decision, His Majesty's government feel that they could not assume the responsibility of adopting a course which would revive the whole system of intergovernmental war debt payments.

"As already pointed out the resumption of full payments to the United States would necessitate a corresponding demand by His Majesty's government from their own war debtors. It would be a re-creation of the conditions which existed prior to the world crisis and were in a large measure responsible for it. Such procedure would throw a bombshell into the European arena which would have financial and economic repercussions over all five continents and would postpone indefinitely the chances of world recovery.

"9. Accordingly, His Majesty's government are reluctantly compelled to take the only other course open to them. But they wish to reiterate that, while suspending further payments until it becomes possible to discuss an ultimate settlement of intergovernmental war debts with a reasonable prospect of agreement, they have no intention of repudiating their obligations, and will be prepared to enter upon further discussion of the subject at any time when in the opinion of the President such discussion would be likely to produce results of value.

"I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration, sir,

"Your most obedient, humble servant,

(Signed) "R. C. LINDSAY.

Gangster May Be Wounded

Joseph B. Keenan Thinks Dillinger Recovering in Hospital.

Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General, told reporters yesterday that the Justice Department has reason to believe John Dillinger, notorious gunman, is wounded, according to the Associated Press.

Keenan declined to discuss the case further. The criminal division which he directs has been hunting the gangster for weeks.

Questioned about a reported statement by him in Boston that Dillinger was in an Illinois hospital and that agents were closing in on him, Keenan said:

"All I said was that the Department of Justice has reason to believe Dillinger is wounded."

He declined to discuss Dillinger's probable whereabouts.

Woman Lawyer Has Last Word In Supreme Court

A woman had the last word in the Supreme Court today when the tribunal quit for the summer.

She was young Miss Ruth Gottdiener, a lawyer of New York, who came to Washington to be admitted to the Supreme Court bar.

In addition to having the last word with the court, she also established the precedent of pleading before being admitted to the bar.

The incident developed through failure of her sponsor, Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), New York, to be on hand when it came her turn to be admitted. She sought to explain the situation to Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who told her she might have a chance to be sworn in later. She left the courtroom in tears.

Dickstein arrived just before court adjourned. He moved admission and Miss Gottdiener was sworn in. Her words "I do" to the oath of office were the last words before the court left the chamber.

ber of the Appropriations Committee, and Robert Bacon, of New York, appealed for a check on Federal spending.

"Unless we stop this enlarged scale relief and get down to earth, and present a definite program on which business can embark, we can not expect recovery," said Taber.

Huge Revolving Fund Seen.

He said that, indirectly, the bill would permit as high as $4,000,000,000 to be sluiced from the RFC, $1,500,000,000 from the PWA, while the PWA might borrow $350,000,000 from the RFC on bonds of beneficiaries, creating a "revolving fund" that could pyramid into over $6,000,000,000.

He charged $4,100,000,000 was provided by Congress for relief in the spring of 1933, and the present Congress has made relief outlays totaling potentially up to $7,622,000,000.

Bacon called on the House to "face the issue" and make "direct appropriations" where relief is necessary.

"There is no chance of these RFC funds expended for relief coming back," he said.

McGugin Attacks "Gag."

The attack on the "gag" suspension rules, under which debate on the measure was held to 40 minutes, with all amendments barred, was led by Representative Harold McGugin, Kansas Republican.

So far as the results are concerned, said McGugin, the Chief Executive might just as well assess taxes and spend the money to suit himself, without any check by Congress.

"The manner in which this bill is being considered is a hypocritical and deceptive repudiation of the Constitution and a destruction of the people's rights."

He called it "a cowardly way of turning back Anglo-Saxon government to the days before Magna Charta."

Although the measure rushed through the House does not tie the President's hands in making relief expenditures, it specifically limits new public works funds to $500,000,000, out of which $100,000,000 would be earmarked for State road grants and $65,000,000 for public buildings. In addition, $11,230,000 is earmarked for forest, public lands and Indian reservation roads.

The earmarked public works money would be drawn from a general fund of $899,675,000 set up in the bill. From this fund also would be drawn money needed to maintain and continue operations of the Civilian Conservation Corps, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. Administration forces admit there is not enough in this jackpot to keep the FERA in funds. It is here that the President would use his power to commandeer unobligated RFC funds.

Einstein Blames U. S. Debt Stand In Europes Crisis

Paris, June 4 (AP).—Prof. Albert Einstein, recently in the United States in exile from Germany, today issued his book "How I See The World," accusing the United States by its war debt policy of contributing to "The Revenge Spirit" which is leading Europe to "ruin."

The scientist warns the United States against the same spirit within its own doors.

"I believe the American people do not entirely re alize their responsibilty," Einstead writes. "Here is what is commonly thought in America:

"'Europe may well go to ruin if she lets herself be carried away by the quarrelsomeness and malice of her inhabitants. The good seeds of our Wilson have grown rather miserably in the sterile European soil. We are strong and sure of ourselves and won5t again mix so quickly in foreign affairs.'

"Whoever thinks thus is shortsighted. America is not innocent of Europe's misery. Collection of its debts without any consideration is precipitating economic and in turn the moral decadence of Europe."

Democrats Put Responsibility For Mural on Mellon and Hyde

Brass Plate on Work of Gilbert White Solves Mystery at Last.

The Department of Agriculture remains sensitive about Gilbert White's allegorical mural, center of controversy among New Dealers and "rugged individualists."

High department officials have publicly disclaimed responsibility for the great mural being affixed to a wall above the Agriculture building's main entrance. Assistant Secretary Rexford G. Tugwell once indicated that had the selection been left to him, he would have chosen something "more modern." Secretary Henry A. Wallace probably felt the same way, but his comment was more guarded.

However, lest there be doubt concerning the mural, a brass plate under it now says:

"Approved—Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury; Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture."

Britain Stops Debt Payments Until U. S. Grants Revision

had been talk of making a payment "on account" now. Finland alone will make good in full. Her Minister, L. Astrom, called at the State Department yesterday and told Acting Secretary Phillips that Finland would pay in full $166,538 due from her on June 15. As the Administration has agreed to halve her relatively small debt, though Mr. Roosevelt decided against asking this Congress to ratify it, there is reason for Finland's keeping up her payments.

No such reason exists for the other debtors. For all practical purposes the debts now pass into the limbo of dormant if not dead assets.

Until Hiram Johnson put through his bill branding as defaulters all debtors who failed to pay in full and denying them access to the American money market there was every reason for the British to continue the regime of part or "token" payments. Why President Roosevelt signed this act still is a mystery.

The effect, however, has been to hasten the complete collapse or cancellation of the debts. British action is the final break-down. France, Italy and others who are in debt to us also owe the British. The British example in suspending all payments to us will be followed by the others unless they are to resume payments at the same time to Great Britain. That is hardly likely.

Dealt Final Blow.

In the opinion of students of the long-standing problem, the Johnson act dealt the final, fatal blow to hopes of further collections and by intensifying irritation further prejudiced the prospects for amicable adjustment.

The British note of more than 2,300 words, the full text of which appears in other columns, recalled the previous requests for revision, cited that the existing debt imposes an "unreasonable" and "inequitable" burden upon the British people, and pointed out that although the British already have paid us $2,025,000,000 on an indebtedness of $4,277,000,000, the total still owed to us as of June 15 amounts to $4,713,785,000. In other words, despite payments of more than $2,000,000,000 no headway has been made in reducing the total owed.

The note contrasted the terms of the British settlement with the less arduous terms of our settlements with other debtors, and it compared the much larger ratio of British payments with the comparatively small amounts paid by the others. It discussed British budgetary difficulties, and the high rate of taxation borne by the British public in order to achieve the recent balancing of the budget. This point was brought out because some Senators have supposed that the showing of a small surplus proved British ability to pay.

Exchange Problem Cited.

The economic difficulties in the way of payment were set out at length in the note. It cited that the budgetary surplus was, after all, "irrelevant," since the real problem is to transfer pounds sterling into dollars and transfer the money across the exchange.

"The attempt to transfer amounts of this magnitude," said the note, "would as its immediate effect cause a sharp depreciation of sterling against the dollar, which as His Majesty's government understand would not be consistent with the monetary policy of the United States Government.

"And in the long run such international transfers would be impossible without a radical alteration in the economic policies of the United States. Payment of the debts implies the willingness of the creditor to accept goods and services sufficient to cover the debts due him over and above the goods and services required to cover his exports, and to make it possible for the United States to receive payment of their claims, it would be necessary to effect a complete reversal of the existing favorable balance of trade between their country and the rest of the world."

Fear Credit Collapse.

The note stressed the difference between "commercial loans raised by foreign governments on the markets for productive purposes" and the war debts which "are neither productive nor self-liquidating." The "unnatural transfers" required to pay war debts, the note cited, would "involve a general collapse of normal international exchange and credit operations."

Having thus recurred to the elementary economics, which appear to be more widely understood on the other side than here, the note concluded that, in the face of the Johnson act, Great Britain had but two choices: one, to pay in full the installment of $262,000,000 due June 15; the other, to suspend all payments pending some future "final revision."

"Deeply as they regret the circumstances which have forced them to take such a decision," the note said, "His Majesty's government feel that they could not assume the responsibility of adopting a course which would revive the whole system of intergovernmental war debt payments."

For that would require the British to call upon their debtors to make good, the note said, and it would be, moreover, "a recreation of the conditions which existed prior to the world crisis and were in a large measure responsible for it."

Momentous Decision.

"Such a procedure," added the note, "would throw a bombshell into the European arena which would have financial and economic repercussions over all five continents and would postpone indefinitely the chances of world recovery."

This represents the most complete, reasoned explanation of the debt economics which has ever been presented in any official note.

The British decision is momentous, for it marks the end of the long, losing struggle of that group in the British government which for reasons of commercial integrity and pride fought to the last to maintain British credit intact. Heavy payments were maintained for years, the so-called token payments were made, against the vanishing hope that adjustment could be reached consistent with economic realities, with political opinions on both sides, and with maintenance of British credit. State Department officials said they knew of no previous instance in all of England's history of failure to pay.

Along with the text of the British note, to which acknowledgment will be made, the State Department made public the copy of its note of May 25 formally notifying the British government that $85,670,765.05 would be due on June 15.

The British note was delivered to the State Department yesterday by Philip Mainwaring Broadmead, First Secretary of the Embassy.

Infection Fatal To President Of Notre Dame

Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell Will Be Buried on Campus.

South Bend, Ind., June 4 (AP).—The death of the Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell today brought messages of condolence from all parts of the world to the University of Notre Dame, which he served as president for six years.

Alumni and friends joined students and faculty in mourning the death of the president shortly after midnight from a streptococcus infection with which he was stricken almost a year ago. He was 47 years old.

Funeral services for Father O'Donnell will be held Wednesday in Sacred Heart Church on the campus. The Very Rev. James Donahue, superior general of the congregation of Holy Cross, will chant the solemn requiem mass. Burial will be in the Community Cemetery on the campus.

Father O'Donnell was elected eleventh president of Notre Dame in 1928.

His last public appearance took place a year ago. He was unable to appear at 1934 commencement exercises yesterday.

A close friend of the late Knute Rockne, Father O'Donnell directed the university's greatest expansion program. Eight buildings and a stadium were added to the campus.

Father O'Donnell was a native Hoosier. As a poet, author, Army chaplain and educator, he won wide fame. He was president of the Catholic Poetry Society of America.

He was a graduate of Notre Dame University and later an English professor here. In 1932 he was awarded the Order of the Crown of Italy by King Victor Emmanuel III.

Tonight a guard of honor of the congregation of Holy Cross stood watch as his body lay in state in the university parlors, and tomorrow night a faculty guard of honor will stand guard.

Tariff Trade Bill Is Passed In Senate Fight

G. O. P. Keeps Up Debate Although Hopelessly Outnumbered.

cause of a multiplicity of barriers thrown up by all nations, and that "twoway" foreign trade can be made profitable to all concerned.

A final vote on the tariff bill came automatically at 5 p. m. as a result of a unanimous consent agreement reached last Friday. For seven hours prior to the vote, the Republicans waged a stubborn, determined fight to restrict the President's authority. But only on one roll call was the integrity of the bill in jeopardy.

That was on the amendment sponsored by Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), Louisiana, providing that the existing tariffs on farm products should not be reducted below the equivalent of the difference of the cost of production at home and abroad. It was defeated, 40 to 46, with eight Democrats bolting their party leadership to support the restriction.

Johnson Amendment Beaten.

Previously the Senate rejected by a vote of 33 to 54 the so-called Johnson agricultural amendment exempting farm products entirely from the provisions of the bill. On this roll call only three Democrats were found voting for the amendment—Adams, Long and McCarran; while three Republicans opposed it—Couzens, LaFollette and Norris.

Other amendments to exempt farm products or articles made from agricultural commodities from the operation of the bill, drafted in language varying somewhat from from the Johnson proposal, were beaten down by majorities of 20 or more votes.

Just before the final vote the Senate witnessed one of the angriest outbursts that has occurred this session. Chairman Harrison offered an amendment exempting from the bill's provision the excise taxes voted several years ago on lumber, oil, coal and copper imported into the country. He said he was not sympathetic with the amendment but that since many Senators had the impression that "excise taxes" would not be disturbed, he wished in good faith to make it certain regarding these four commodities. He said the effect would be "to freeze" the excise taxes on oil, copper, coal and lumber.

Ashurst Leaps to Feet.

Before Harrison could complete his explanation, Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, who was turned from a low tariff Democrat into a tariff protectionist by the copper industry of his State, leaped to his feet, his eyes flashing.

In a voice resounding throughout the chamber and with his hand thumping his desk, Ashurst asserted that he protested "this drawing of an assassin's dirk at the eleventh hour against those who have loyally supported this bill throughout the debate." He shouted that the Harrison proposal had been "conceived in iniquity, born in sin and is being offered here in unfairness."

Harrison finally stopped the apparently enraged Arizonan to explain that he regarded his amendment as friendly to the copper interests, since it would prevent the President from lowering the cooper excise tax. Ashurst shouted back that it would prevent the President from increasing the tariff on copper.

"I am willing to take my chances with Franklin D. Roosevelt," he asserted.

Long Offers It Again.

Harrison quickly withdrew the amendment, but Long rushed to the desk, picked up the same amendment and offered it as his own. Ashurst demanded a roll call vote, with the result that the proposal was defeated, 29 to 57. The oil, lumber, copper and coal excise or import taxes were written into the 1932 revenue act by a series of log-rolling maneuvers in the Senate. The taxes expire in June, 1935.

Long, at the last minute, after all debate had been ended, offered as a substitute for the bill the text of the Democratic-sponsored tariff measure which former President Hoover vetoed in 1932. This measure would change the flexible clause to make recommendations of the Tariff Commission effective within 60 days after being reported to Congress, unless the latter in the meanwhile affirmatively rejected them.

It also requested the President to initiate a movement for an international economic conference to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements, but provided that the latter would be subject to Congressional approval.

Unable to make an explanation of his proposal, Long directed a parliamentary inquiry to Vice President John N. Garner, asking if the chair could not explain to the Senate that the proposed substitute was the same as the Democratic bill vetoed by Hoover.

Chamber Echoes With Laughter.

"The chair has no statement to make," replied Garner, as the Senate roared with laughter at Long's trick.

The Long proposal was beaten by a vivi voce vote.

The Republicans demanded a roll call on an amendment by Harrison, which would make it impossible for a producer of a commodity affected by an agreement negotiated under the bill to make it inoperative until passed on by the courts. The vote was 59 to 29.

Another amendment which the Republicans fought hard for was offered by Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California. It provided that agreements made under the bill would not become effective until ratified by a majority vote of House and Senate, taken within 20 days after their submission to Congress. This would have made it impossible to bring such agreements into effect while Congress was in recess. It was rejected, 34 to 50.

On the final roll call the bill was supported by 51 Democrats, 5 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite, and opposed by 5 Democrats and 28 Republicans—thus making good Harrison's prediction of several weeks ago that "for every vote we lose on our side we'll pick up a Republican vote."

Farm Leaders Map Quick Drought Relief

under seal as security for Government loans for live stock feeding, cause increased marketings of beef cattle and cause slight increases in milk prices because of grain feeding to dairy cattle through lack of pastures.

Cash Needs Unknown.

Hopkins refused to estimate how much money might be needed to meet the problem, but reports were frequent that the Government was ready to spend half a billion dollars to see the situation through.

"The President is determined to meet needs of the drought area in an aggressive and affirmative fashion," Hopkins said. He added that $9,000,000 already had been made available for drought relief and that, in addition to the States named yesterday, more grants probably would be announced today.

Grants announced yesterday were South Dakota, $250,000 to employ 40,000 farmers; North Dakota, $500,000 for 40,000; Minnesota, $80,000 for 25,000; Wisconsin, $250,000 for 20,000; Montana, $150,000 for 10,000; Kansas, $200,000 for 8,500; Nebraska, $200,000 for 8,000, and Wyoming, $50,000 for 5,000 workers. By today, Hopkins said he expected to have additional grants for New Mexico, Colorado, Nevada and possibly Oklahoma.

The relief chief estimated approximately 75 per cent of the money, plus State relief funds, would go for wages, and the rest to materials. Farmers will be expected to buy feed and necessities with their wages. Work projects will include wells, roads, school building, canning projects and the like.

Program Discussed.

At yesterday's White House conference it was understood a $475,000,000 program was discussed, subject to amplification. It would embrace continued cattle buying, started last week, feed and seed buying and work relief. Reports said estimates had been made that $100,000,000 would be needed for work relief; $100,000,000 for feed purchases and $200,000,000 for cattle buying. Farm administration officials hinted that some of the most arid land would be bought outright and retired from cultivation.

As to the extent of funds available for drought aid, Hopkins insisted he could obtain sufficient money. In addition, officials pointed to a supply bill providing $1,178,000 and potential relief provisions far beyond that figure.

Chicago markets showed considerable gains for farm commodities as a result of the drought, the Associated Press reported. From April 30 to June 4, July wheat jumped from 79½ to 96½ cents and corn made a 6-cent gain.

Meanwhile, Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, declared that the AAA would not drop its acreage reduction program. The drought, he said, "emphasizes the necessity for a planned agriculture."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, now in the Midwest, yesterday personally inspected the arid areas and was in touch with his department. His reports were added to those given the President at the White House meeting, which pictured the situation as ranging from "acute distress" in the North Central States to lesser damage in nearly every State except the Atlantic and Gulf seaboards. Cattle were reported dying, grasshoppers and cinch bugs raising havoc and thousands of acres of grain withered.

G. O. P. Leaders Open Debate On Chairman and Platform

prosecutor in Saginaw County in 1923. Four years later he was named attorney general of Michigan and in 1931 entered the Statehouse at Lansing for a two-year gubernatorial term. Brucker is a Presbyterian and a member of the American Legion, Masonic and Elks lodges.

Efforts of a group of insiders to throw the chairmanship to Walter S. Hallanan, West Virginia committeeman, ran into bitter opposition. Some of it came from back home, some of it from former Hoover men, especially Walter F. Brown, of Ohio, former Postmaster General, and from Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, who, though not a member of the committee, is here as an interested unofficial participant.

The young red-haired Kansas committeeman, John D. Hamilton, was being talked of among some committee members. He is a newcomer on the committee and a protege of the late Dave Malvane, a National Committee leader for a generation.

Edge's Chances Wane.

Former Senator Walter Edge, of New Jersey, continued to be mentioned but his chances seemed to wane late today when Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, urged the party to go West for its man.

Senator Reed urged this so that it could not be said that the Republican party was controlled by ultra-conservatives of the East. He urged that the party, through its National Committee, go on record in a brief but emphatic declaration of policy standing for a return to the constitution and a square deal as opposed to the new deal.

Behind the scenes this question of making a party declaration developed considerable controversy. A group led by Charles D. Hilles, New York National committeeman, former anti-Hoover leader and regarded as spokesman for conservative New York financial interests, drew up a four-page declaration of principles, declaring straight-out war on the New Deal.

More progressive members opposed this. In a short time, Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, who holds a proxy for J. Will Taylor, Tennessee member of the committee, had produced a substitute draft in which he urged the party to stand for progressive principles under the Constitution and to shake off influences which had retarded its progress.

A hot fight over the final wording of this party platform is in prospect when a drafting committee is appointed tomorrow to put the document in shape for action by the committee.

Reed Leaves Sick Bed.

Leaving his sick bed, Senator Reed came to Chicago to give counsel and advice to the party as it seeks to chart its course. Since his spectacular victory over Gov. Clifford Pinchot in the recent Pennsylvania primary, Senator Reed has become one of the most influential spokesmen in the party. Wearing an old flannel bathrobe over his pajamas, Senator Reed was sought out by party leaders all day in his suite at the Blackstone Hotel.

"All of us Pennsylvanians feel tremendously that this is a critical moment in the life of the Nation and in the history of the party," Senator Reed said.

"I think it would be wise for the party to make its attitude clear on the guarantees of the Constitution and the bill of rights and those other guarantees of liberty which have been so seriously disregarded in recent days. It has been a Democratic pretense, and with a good deal of success, that the Republican party stands for a return to some past era. We know that is not so.

"The party looks to the future, and while it doesn't prattle on any New Deal, it realizes that conditions have changed since the World War and that they can be met only by the principle of the square deal.

"We believe that it is possible to maintain a square deal and at the same time maintain the Constitution just as clearly now as in the days of Theodore Roosevelt.

Cites Own Victory.

"Our own experience in Pennsylvania last month shows that the affection of the people for the Constitution is as strong as ever. It's clear that nobody wants to revert to the unfairness and inequalities of what is called the Old eDal. Equally clear is that the peopel are not going to shut their eyes and swallow blindly anything that professors dish out in the name of the New Deal."

Senator Reed said that the party should call attention to broken promises in the Democratic platform of 1932.

As to the chairmanship, he felt that the important thing was to find the man who could best express the renewed vitality which he feels the Republican party has.

"I would be delighted to accept any man as chairman who can express clearly that adherence to the Constitution which all of us feel so strongly," Senator Reed continued.

He said that he would rather see a party chairman from West of the Alleghanies.

"It has been contended that the Republican party represents only the ultra conservative elements of the East," he explained. "That is not so. It would be a mistake, I think, to pick a man from an industrial State like Pennsylvania."

This was taken to eliminate Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, former Ambassador to Italy, and to mitigate against Senator Edge, who, nevertheless, has some strong support in the committee.

Watson on Scene.

Former Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, was active about committee headquarters in his own behalf, although his chances for the chairmanship were regarded as dubious.

Many changes may be made in the draft of the off-year "platform" before it is presented to the National committee. But leaders of the Eastern conservative group, who appear to be in command of the field, prepared a tentative draft which would crack down on bureaucracy, regimentation, "vote-buy-measures at the taxpayers' expense, monetary tinkering, budget juggling and experimental stretching of the Constitution," with an appeal for individual liberty.

An effort will be made to fix the stamp of radicalism on the Administration, without representing the Republican party as being reactionary. A few guestures are expected to be made toward the liberals, although whether specific endorsement of old age pensions and social insurance will be included was uncertain tonight.

In one tentative draft, the party was pledged to adhere to its fundamental principles, but to recognize changes in economic and social conditions. The constitutionality of many recovery experiments may be challenged and one draft proposed to cite a Civil War Supreme Court precedent in support of this position.

Presidential Power Decried

Concentration of power in Exectutive hands will be decried as well as heavy expenditures, repudiation of obligations and interferece with bsiness and agriculture. The President's reciprocal tariff measure will come in for attack if present language remains in the tentative draft of the Eastern group, although the decalaration of Ogden Mills for abandonment of economic nationalism and a recognition of the need of international exchange of commodities may be included in the language. In any event the committee is not expected to champion extreme protectionism.

The Eastern draft asserts that business recovery thus far has developed in spite of, rather than because of, Administration policies.

Sentiment is strong for inserting also a provision calling for a stable monetary system and for a return to "The Old-Fashioned Dollar."

Convention atmosphere surrounded the Palmer House, where the National committee has set up headquarters. E. F. Colladay and Mrs. Virginia White Speel, District of Columbia members of the committee, were on hand early. Both declined to indicate any choice for chairman.

Taft There With Proxy.

Galen L. Taft, remembered by Washington taxpayers as former collector of internal revenue at Baltimore, arrived with the proxy of Senator Goldsborough, who was held in Washington by the tariff vote. Mrs. Calvin Gabriel, Maryland committeewoman, called at committee headquarters.

While the majority of members milled in the lobby at the Palmer House, the Eastern insiders, headed by Hilles, held closed conferences at the Blackstone Hotel, amid a buzzing and the going and coming of party leaders like that which took place in the same hotel when Harding was nominated in 1920, when the party likewise was struggling for a comeback against a Democratic President.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt arrived with two votes by holding proxies of Philippine and Puerto Rican committeemen. Ray Benjamin, tall, mysterious former Hoover scout, came in with the proxy of George Wingfield, Nevada committeeman.

Pinchot Warns Of Impending Crisis in Steel

Industry Heads Plan Action to Avert Walkout.

Steel mills are "arming," Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania warned President Roosevelt yesterday as the Administration redoubled efforts to avert threatened "bloody warfare" in the strike of 100,000 steel workers, tentatively set for June 16.

Other developments in the brewing walkout:

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, conferred two hours with W. A. Irvin, president of United States Steel, in the privacy of a Mayflower Hotel suite.

President Roosevelt told Congressional leaders to press for the passage before adjournment of the Wagner labor disputes bill.

William J. Spang, leader of a faction in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, said he would like to see Johnson "walk up to an open hearth furnace and get his summer pants scorched for $21.48 a week."

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, chairman of the National Labor Board, arranged a conference for today with Spang.

Pinchot told reporters the chief purpose of his White House visit was to report:

"The steel companies are arming with machine guns and barbed wire entanglements. The situation looks bad, but I am entirely ready to meet whatever crisis that arises."

Johnson was believed to have discussed with Irvin the possibility of creation of a Government-directed board to decide the prime issue of the strike—the question of who should represent employes in bargaining with the management.

Auto Arbitration Cited.

He declined, however, even to confirm that he talked with Irvin. After the conference, Irvin departed for New York. R. D. Desvernine, counsel for the industry, remained in Washington.

The recovery chief cited achievements of a similar board of arbitration for the automobile industry, set up after the President headed off a strike in that industry two months ago.

Spang, a barrel-chested, iron-gray-haired steel worker with a booming voice reminiscent of Johnson's characteristic parade-ground accent, exhibited to newsmen a registered letter addressed to A. C. Cummings, general superintendent of the Duquesne plant of the Carnegie Steel Co., unaccepted by Cummings and returned by the postoffice.

Spang Attacks Code.

Obviously nettled at the mere thought of the incident, Spang shouted:

"We made a lawful demand for recognition and that's the way they treat us."

"The great idea in Washington," he added, "seems to be that we steel workers get grand benefits out of this revised code on wages. Take the code's own figures, suspicious as they look, with not a detail to back them up—$21.84 a week average for making steel.

Arms Delegates Still at Odds On Parley Plans

America and England Want Germany to Return to Conference.

Geneva, June 4 (A).—Delegates of the principal powers found themselves still sharply at odds today as the steering committee of the disarmament conference sought unsuccessfully to map the future course of the parley, now in adjournment until Wednesday.

Great Britain and the United States emphasized the importance of inducing Germany to return to the conference. Russia insisted on consideration of security pacts and France opposed any present approach to Germany as "useless."

Norman Davis, representative of the United States, contended that the conference could study general security in the form of guarantees for a disarmament agreement.

"We feel that the best way to get security is in connection with disarmament," he said, after Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, had offered his proposal to reestablish a permanent security conference.

"Some nations are interested in security," Davis continued, "but the great number is not interested unless it is accompanied by disarmament."

"We do not want to capitalize on the absence of Germany," he said, insisting that it would be best to seek return of that nation to the conference.

Arthur Henderson, president of the conference, insisted that it is necessary to get Germany back. He proposed a resolution urging all powers to adopt every possible means to reconcile their differences.

He proposed an adjournment of the conference then in order to seek the return of the Reich. Capt. Anthony Eden, British delegate, supported the proposal.

The suggestion, however, brought from Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, of France, an outburst of sarcasm which recalled his clash with Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, last Wednesday.

"If you mean the steering committee should trot over to Berlin for a session," he said, "I for one will not go. Eden has been touring Europe without results. We have valuable proposals before us; let's get on with our work."

Capt. Eden in supporting Henderson declared that unless some effort is made to settle outstanding differences, the conference is wasting its time.

Litvinoff's security pact proposal, he said, is outside the proper scope of the conference.

The Russian's resolution, which declares that the present international situation is "replete with menacing symptoms of increasing danger of war," proposed that the conference sit permanently as "a conference of peace."

minding her two children, Joan Carroll Thayer, 3, and Shirley Virginia, 18 months.

Caller Hangs Up.

Thayer was disturbed by his wife and the jangling of the phone.

"Come," half sobbed Mrs. Thayer, "don't disturb Helen, but come and talk to this man."

Thayer, a policeman with 30 years' experience, grasped the instrument, but the person on the other end of the line hung up.

"My boy had few bad habits, although I guess we all have some," said Thayer. "He's home when he isn't working. I'm afraid his body will be found somewhere along the roadside."

Police investigating the case said they feared young Thayer might have been the victim of automobile thieves, who stole his car, slugged him and left him for dead.

"Every detective on the force is working to find Thayer," said Capt. Bernard Thompson, assistant chief of detectives, last night. "So far we are pretty much in the dark about it."

Court Upholds U. S. Air Mail Cancellations

Right to Recover Contracts Is Denied Companies by Decision.

tracts, could be recovered in a suit against the United States in the Court of Claims, a body that was specially set up by Congress to handle litigation against the sovereign state.

Amendment Not Violated.

The most significant item included in the five reasons for dismissing the suits was the one that held there was no violation of the fifth amendment in Farley's act. Government lawyers pointed out that if Farley had acted unconstitutionally there was a right of action against him personally, since as an agent of the United States he was not empowered to act without proper authority.

This point was bitterly attacked by Donovan. He claimed the air lines had acquired property rights in their contracts, and should not have been deprived of them without at least a hearing and a chance to refute the charges of fraud and collusion that were leveled at them.

Directly answering Donovan's complaint that Farley had acted arbitrarily, Justice O'Donoghue cited Section 3950 of the revised statutes, under which the Postmaster General was empowered to refuse to contract with air companies that had banded together to stifle bidding, which was one of the contentions of the Government.

Donovan Seeks Injunction.

Under that section, Farley can refuse to negotiate contracts with airlines that have been guilty of collusion in contract bidding. The penalty for the first offense is a ban against Governmental contracts for five years, while for the second, the ban is eternal.

On behalf of the airlines, Donovan asked two things. First, he said, he sought an injunction to prevent the Postmaster General from carrying out the annulment of the contracts; and secondly, that the imposition of the ban against participation in future Government contracts be lifted. Pointing out that the present air contracts are merely temporary, Donovan said that the real breach of contract occurred when President Roosevelt turned the mails over to the Army, an act which he admitted was not subject to any court order.

Airlines Want Vindication.

An intimation that the air companies were chiefly interested in restoring the good will and public esteem lost through Farley's promulgation, was given by Donovan when he said his clients were vitally interested in having the stigma "guilty of fraud and collusion" lifted from them.

In that connection, he declared, the companies would probably be satisfied with a court order, moot in form, that would be accepted as an indication that there had been no underhand dealings in the famous conference in the Postoffice Department Building that preceded the awarding of the contracts. The conferences have been termed "spoils conferences" by opponents of the past regime.

In reply to an assertion by Donovan that the cancellation was "in the nature of a bill of attainder" Assistant United States Attorneys John W. Fihelly and David A. Pine, and Carl L. Ristine, of the Postoffice Department, showed Justice O'Donoghue that the powers permitting the annulment were granted in 1872. They were not, they said, retroactive, which would have made them "attainders."

Cites Lack of Hearing.

The final phase of Donovan's argument found him challenging the right of the Government to annul the mail contracts without notice or hearing. He said that under the terms of the contracts the companies were entitled to 45 days notice, with a hearing, before their contracts could be cancelled.

Last Flat-Bed Stamps Popular.

South Bend, Wash. (U.P.).—The South Bend Postoffice had difficulty in selling the 1914 issue of 12-cent postage stamps, of which they bought 10,000 when issued. The last few days stamp collectors have swarmed in to buy them. It was found they were the last stamps made by the Government by the flat-bed printing process.

New Element No. 93 May Recreate World

the artificial fabrication of a new element constituted outside the series of elements known on earth."

In 13½ minutes, he said, the new element's atoms have changed their nature. He compared it to radium, which continuously transforms itself, but is continually reformed from uranium.

The discoverer, Fermi, is one of the youngest members of the cabinet, being only 32 years old, but is known as a brilliant physicist.

Outside Discovery Realm.

The discovery of element "93," reported in Rome goes outside the realm of previous discoveries of new simple substances.

Elements are given atomic numbers, ranging upward with their atomic weights, hydrogen being No. 1, and uranium, No. 92.

Physicists were able to predict the nature of undiscovered "in-between" elements long before they were discovered, where the two known elements closest together did not bear the relationship of next neighbors in the atomic scale.

Of the elements known to exist only two have not been discovered, these being Nos. 89 and 91.

House Probers Open Nazi Quiz On Propaganda

Committee to Begin Hearings by Dickstein and Voted Last March.

The first of a series of open hearings into foreign propaganda activities in the United States, with particular emphasis on that alleged to be carried on by the Nazi government of Germany, is to be held by a special House investigating committee today.

The committee, of which Representative McCormack, (Democrat) Massachusetts, is chairman, will begin its public inquiry in the caucus room of the old House Office Building at 10 a. m.

Cite Nazi Activities.

At a series of executive sessions, the committee has heard witnesses tell of alleged Nazi activity and Nazi societies have been linked with the "Silver Shirts," an organization which made its appearance last winter.

The inquiry was authorized by the House in March, after Representative Dickstein, (Democrat) New York, chairman of the Immigration Committee, had pressed for a probe. A special subcommittee conducted an informal inquiry last fall, but could not compel attendance of witnesses or file a report with the House.

Dickstein Refuses Chair.

Dickstein refused the chairmanship of the investigating committee on the ground he did not wish questions of racial prejudice to be raised. He is a member of the committee which opens its hearings today. Other members are Representatives Weideman, (Democrat) Michigan; Kramer, (Democrat) California; Jenkins, (Republican) Ohio; Taylor, (Republican) Tennessee, and Guyer, (Republican) Kansas.

Former U. S. Senator Thomas W. Hardwick, of Georgia, is counsel for the committee.

Bull Dog Ends Life By Opening Gas Jet

Murphysboro, Ill. (U.P.).—Cuple a pet bull dog of E. L. Chapman, committed suicide by taking gas here recently.

The dog, left alone in the Chapman home, apparently turned on the gas jet. When Chapman returned home he found his dog unconscious and the house filled with fumes. He called the fire department inhalator crew.

Firemen worked over the animal for an hour in an unsuccessful effort to revive it.

Ban Liquor During Election.

Cleveland (U.P.). — Clevelanders were deprived of cocktails and hard liquor here during the day on which a special election was held, in line with the board of election's construction of the new State liquor laws. The ban was lifted, however, after polls closed at 6:30 p. m. and did not include 3.2 beer, held to be non-intoxicating.

Anti-Hands-in-Pocket Rule.

Boston (U.P.).—An anti-hands-in-pants-pocket campaign was launched by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman to rid his officers of the habit. He said that he was tired of seeing his men standing in public places, while on duty in uniform, with their hands in their pants pockets.

Roosevelt Used Same Key.

Cincinnati (U.P.).—When President Roosevelt pressed a key in Washington to signal the formal opening of Station WLW's 500,000 transmitter here, he touched the same gold-plated telegraph key President Woodrow Wilson tapped 20 years ago to signal the formal opening of the Panama Canal.

Safety School On Pedestrian Traffic Urged

Chamber of Commerce Wants Citizens Taught to Cross Streets.

A campaign to teach Washington's pedestrians when, how and where to cross the streets was asked yesterday by the transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

More police at crossings and abolition of the left turn privilege for motorists in the downtown district, between 8 a. m. and 6:30 p. m., also were recommended. A resolution regretting the curtailment of the police force under present budgetary requirements, and recommending that the force be restored to its previous strength as soon as possible was adopted.

Public Ignores Rules.

The committee, of which George Kneipp is chairman, heard the report of a sub-committee on pedestrian control, whose members are Grover Blackstone, D. S. Schmidt and C. H. Cooke. Pedestrian control is one of five points in the chamber's program for inproving traffic conditions and reducing accidents in the District.

The sub-committee found that the lack of pedestrian control at present was due to the public attitude of ignoring present regulations, lack of sufficient regulations and failure to enforce those now on the books. It was suggested that an "experienced, full-time man" be given the job of supervising pedestrian control measures for from six months to a year or until the public was sufficiently educated.

Brown Likes Plans.

Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown told the committee that he was in favor of their recommendations. Commissioner Hazen pointed out the need for better regulation in the downtown area, because of the fact that 25,000 cars move in and out of it every day. The Commissioner also called attention to the small appropriation in the District budget for employment of police officers.

The committee reported favorably on the suggestion of the National Street and Highway Safety Conference for a "National Safety Week."

Bristol Sponsors Children's Camp

Those on Relief Rolls Will Get 2-Week Outing.

Bristol, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—The Bristol welfare council and affiliated organizations will cooperate with the relief agencies of Scott and Wise Counties in sponsoring a community camp for the undernourished and underprivileged children of the three sections at Fort Blackmore, Va., in Scott County.

The camp, expected to be in operation by July 1, will qualify as a Federal relief project, as only children whose parents are on the relief rolls of the cooperating agencies will be accepted. Overhead expenses will be borne by the Government.

The camp operated by Mrs. Margaret Hoff at Fort Blackmore was decided upon for the children's camp. The term will be divided into three two-week periods, one for boys, one for girls and the third for smaller children of both sexes. Only children between the ages of 8 and 14 will be enrolled.

Three Prisoners Flee Augusta Jail

One Is Recaptured After Guard Is Overpowered.

Staunton, Va., June 4 (AP).—After overpowering the jailor and two trusties, three colored prisoners escaped today from the Augusta County Jail, but one of them was recaptured a few minutes later.

J. F. Long, the jailer, who was struck by a chain torn from the wall of the cell block, suffered two cuts across his head and face, but the two trusties were not injured. James Johnson, 34, held on a charge of housebreaking and larceny; James Carter, 22, of Staunton, and Roy Blair, 38, of Augusta County, both wanted for housebreaking and larceny, were those who escaped. Two blocks from the jail, P. R. White, a Staunton policeman, recognized Carter and captured him.

shot four times in the back and twice in the arms.

Returning to the cottage the police rapped on the door and ordered the occupant to come out. The McKeever woman walked out and surrendered.

Refuses to Talk.

Although told he was likely to die, Mais refused to answer police questions at the hospital. All he would say, police reported, was:

"Somebody please tell my mother."

He gave her name and address in Philadelphia.

Department of Justice men were checking up gun serial numbers with police last night in the belief the trio obtained arms from the Hyattsville (Md.) National Guard Armory. Capt. John Brooks, Hyattsville company commander, said two automatic rifles, five or six pistols, and ammunition were stolen from the armory Saturday night. Two rifles and a pistol were taken from Mais and his confederates. Prince Georges County police described the arsenal looting as the work of an organized gang.

With yesterday's arrests, only three members of the gang are at large. Mrs. Barbara Kendrick, wife of John Kendrick, was arrested last week in Philadelphia and identified by police as the woman seen coming from the house in Upper Darby, Pa., where Mrs. Fontaine was shot last month because she "knew too much."

Three at Large.

Kendrick, escaped Lorton convict and one-time bodyguard of Milsey Henry, slain racketeer, slipped through a police dragnet last week and escaped South. Arthur Misanas, 37, and Herbert Myers, 39, are the other two members of the gang as listed by Washington police.

Phillips was killed in a gun duel with Policeman John A. Caton early in April. Kendrick and Davis were with him when he walked into a trap at Adams Mill road and Ontario place.

Information furnished by Mrs. Fontaine, held here in a hideaway known only to Metropolitan police and Federal agents, has connected the gang with three murders, a $60,000 bank robbery in Richmond, a $30,000 cigarette hijacking near Weldon, N. C., and numerous holdups. A few weeks prior to the Union Station robbery, a gang answering to similar descriptions looted a mail car at Charlottesville, Va., and fled with more than $5,000 in registered letters.

Samuel C. Berlin, who may have been a member of the gang, was arrested in Baltimore last week in connection with the $1,640 Huerich Brewery holdup here last fall.

Woman Tries Leap Into River; Is Held

Norfolk, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—Miss Dorothy Berger, 26, who gave her address at a local hotel, was held by Patrolman A. D. Cooper last night after she is alleged to have tried to leap into the water from the Granby Street Bridge.

The woman said he had lived in Washington but declined to give her address in that city. She is to have a hearing before Police Justice Spindle tomorrow.

W. Worth Smith Files Petition In Bankruptcy

Virginia State Senator Lists Liabilities at $102,952.15.

Richmond, June 4 (Spl.).—State Senator W. Worth Smith, jr., of Louisa, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1933, today filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court. The petition said he is without funds to pay the court costs.

Liabilities of $102,952.15 were scheduled by Senator Smith, who placed his assets at $59,300 in real estate.

Among the secured creditors were the Guaranty Trust Co. of Richmond, $20,000; Receivers of the American Bank & Trust Co., $34,600; First National Bank of Louisa, $9,000, and trustees for three parcels of property, $19,500.

Unsecured creditors were receivers of the American Bank & Trust Co., $6,000, and the National Bank of Orange, $1,000. He also has double liability of an unspecified amount on stock of the First National Bank of Louisa.

Senator Smith opposed George C. Peery and Joseph T. Deal in the last Democratic primary. He entered the Senate by defeating the veteran C. O'Connor Goolrick, of Fredericksburg, on the bond issue question. While a resident of Louisa, he engaged in business in Richmond and was formerly president of the Dealers Motor Finance Corporation and the Southern Bank & Trust Co.

Lexington, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—Clarence Lane Sager, New York attorney, today received the Thomas Nelson Page Medal, "presented annually to an alumnus of Washington and Lee University for his devotion and service to the university." President Francis Pendleton Gaines, of Washington and Lee, made the presentation at a meeting of the alumni association.

Another feature of the meeting was an oral tribute to Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia by John W. Davis, of New York, Democratic candidate for President of the United States in 1924, and alumnus of Washington and Lee with the class of 1892 and the law class of 1895. Gov. Peery was graduated from the Washington and Lee Law School in 1897 and studied under Davis when the latter was assistant professor of law at Washington and Lee in 1896-97. Gov. With the passing of the strike threat, union officials are being quoted as saying that there would have been no strike in Danville.

P. W. Milstead, a member of the Danville Central Labor Council, said there was some resentment at the means of calling the strike without giving the local the right to vote on it.

Richmond, June 4 (AP).—Moonshiners are turning to steam distilleries with refining apparatus in the hope of competing with the State's liquor monopoly, Daniel L. Porter, district supervisor of the alcohol tax unit of the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue, said today.

Col. Porter said the stills captured recently have been expensive plants, the illicit manufacturers having lost much of their market for unrefined liquor.

Future W. & M. Policy Debated; Presidential Candidates Grow

Williamsburg, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—As the list of unofficial nominees for the presidency of the College of William and Mary grew by the hour, with Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, regarded as probable first choice, the board of visitors today was being urged to determine a general educational policy for the future before deciding upon a successor to the late Dr. J. A. C. Chandler.

Among the questions of policy expected to have a close bearing upon the man selected are:

Shall William and Mary become a liberal arts college eventually independent of State support?

Shall the college be planned for service as a teacher training center, primarily?

Shall the college be developed into a State liberal arts college with emphasis upon history, political science and social science?

The list of prospective presidents included former Gov. John Garland Pollard, Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University; former Gov. Westmoreland Davis, Frank Bane, former Virginia commissioner of public welfare; John Stewart Bryan, vice rector of the college and Richmond publisher; Dr. W. T. Hodges, director of William and Mary extension work; Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, rector of Bruton Parish and "father of the Williamsburg restoration idea;" Dr. Douglas H. Gordon, former president of St. John's, Annapolis; Dr. Howard Lee McBain, dean of the graduate faculties at Columbia; Dr. Edward Gwathmey, president of Converse College, S. C.; Dr. Havilsh Babcock, of the University of South Carolina, and Dr. J. N. Hillman, president of Emory and Henry College.

Friends of nominees have advanced their choices for various reasons, but the division seems to be between continuance of the present policy with an emphasis upon teacher training work and development of the liberal arts idea and a trend away from a field declared already oversaturated in Virginia. The latter group has advanced the idea that William and Mary, with its historical background and its strong traditions, soon could be developed as an independent institution, free of the necessity of State support.

Board Weighs Wine and Beer

Virginia Licensing Rules Enable Partners to Sell Two Ways.

Richmond, June 4 (AP).—Alcoholic Beverage Control Board members were engaged today in seeking a compromise on the knotty problem of on-and-off-premises sale of wine and beer.

A possible solution was suggested which would enable one establishment to sell wine and beer for both immediate consumption and transportation.

Dual licenses to the same individual are banned by the control act, but the board was understood to have been told that the act limits the licensing only with reference to the individual in whose name it is issued. Another person, for instance, a partner, might be able to hold another license, and both permits would cover sales at the same locality.

Meanwhile the board's new mail order service went into operation today. Under the scheme Virginians residing in localities where no liquor stores have been established, may order liquor from the board in lots not exceeding one gallon. Each order must be accompanied by a certified check or money order for the full amount plus 50 cents expressage.

A number of orders were received by the board's office today but some were returned because common bank checks, instead of certified checks or money orders, were inclosed.

"I consider it an honor to deliver the address at my daughter's graduation," the Governor said. "It is an event that comes in the lives of few men."

Next week he is to deliver the graduation address at the University of Virginia.

State Grange Will Convene At Frederick

350 Are Expected From 66 Units at Session December 4-6.

Frederick, Md., June 4 (Spl.).—Frederick was chosen at the quarterly meeting of Pomona Grange at Lewistown, for the annual convention of the Maryland State Grange, December 4, 5 and 6. About 350 representatives of the 66 granges of the State are expected at the sessions.

A committee composed of J. Homer Remsberg, near Middletown; Henry R. Shoemaker, of Frederick, county agent; Austin P. Renn, near Buckeystown; Mrs. Harry L. Davis, near Monrovia, and Miss Helen Pearson, of Frederick, home demonstration agent, was appointed to make preliminary plans for the convention.

About 150 persons attended the quarterly meeting, representing all of the eight subordinate units in this county and three in Washington County. David Fry, of Jefferson, master, presided at the business session. Edward L. Holter, State organizer, announced the formation of one new grange at Myersville, in this county. It was decided to invite the Federation of Rural Women's Clubs and Farm Bureau to take part in a joint picnic this summer and a committee composed of Alvie M. Etzler, near Mount Pleasant; Edward S. Holter, near Middletown; Howard Smith, of Braddock; Harry L. Davis, near Monrovia, and Henry Stottlemyer, of Lewistown, was appointed to meet representatives of the Woman's Clubs and Farm Bureau to plan the event.

The following adopted resolutions said in effect:

That Maryland should ratify the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution.

That the present tax law should be amended to give owners of real estate in arrears in taxes one year before advertising their property for sale.

That the fee system in public offices should be changed to a salary basis.

That the grange go on record as favoring the Farm Bureau resolution assessing farm property as a single unit instead of a double unit.

That the grange favor an income tax as a replacement tax rather than a sales tax.

That convicts should become servants of society instead of guests and wards.

The afternoon session was featured by an address by Eugene W. Pruitt, school superintendent, who traced the development of Maryland's public school system from 1825.

Short addresses were made by Henry R. Shoemaker, county agent, on the wheat allotment plan and by William J. Grove on highway construction and maintenance. The next meeting will be at Leitersburg, Washington County, the first Saturday in September.

Textile Strike Hangs on Labor Board Decision

Workers at Hopewell Plant Stay on Job; Employers' Reply Awaited.

Richmond, June 4 (Spl.).—Textile workers in Hopewell today are awaiting the final decision of the National Labor Board and a statement from the Tubize Chatillon Corporation in the strike crisis, which still prevails after several weeks of agitation, it is reported.

Still on their jobs, William F. Kelley, International vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, said the workers will stay there until the labor board hands down a decision.

Meanwhile, officers of the Tubize Corporation have declared they will give an answer to the proposal for the settlement of the Hopewell dispute some time this week. This is expected momentarily.

R. S. Burrows, works manager of the Tubize plant in Hopewell, today said he had no statement to make in connection with new developments. J. L. Timms, president of the Hopewell local union, also refused today to discuss any details of the strike situation.

R. T. Bowden, special representative of the State Federation of Labor, in negotiations affecting the Hopewell local, said today he expected a decision from the National board before Wednesday.

"I do not expect the Hopewell local's executive board to take any action until the National Labor Board announces its decision in the case," he said.

Uncle Arrested In Beating of Girl

Baltimore, June 4 (Spl.).—An 11-year-old girl is under treatment at St. Agnes' Hospital here for severe bruises, cuts and shock, while police of Catonsville hold her uncle, Otto Sizemore, of Oella, on charges of beating her.

The child is Margaret Cole, who formerly lived with her grandmother at Illchester, Baltimore County. When her grandmother became ill two weeks ago, Margaret went to live with Sizemore. Last week neighbors reported hearing the child's cries, and took her to St. Agnes' Hospital where she was given treatment. She then went to live with another uncle, Guy Watson.

Yesterday Mr. Watson informed Magistrate H. C. Andrea, of Catonsville, that the child claimed Sizemore had beaten her. The girl collapsed while talking with Magistrate Andrea, and he ordered her returned for further treatment at the hospital, and at the same time issuing a warrant for Sizemore's arrest. The uncle denies beating Margaret, but is held pending the outcome of the girl's injuries.

Jobless Relief Cost Conclave Set by Ritchie

Officials Asked to Present Estimates Friday in Annapolis.

Baltimore, June 4 (Spl.).—Gov. Ritchie today called a conference in Annapolis for next Friday to ascertain what the costs of unemployment relief are likely to be in Maryland during the next 12 months.

Those asked to attend include Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator; Walter N. Kirkman, State purchasing agent, and Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore. Several other officials also may be invited.

They will be asked to present to the Governor their estimates of what the Maryland relief bill will be during the next year. Later, the Governor is expected to ask the opinion of leading citizens of Baltimore and the counties as to how the relief burden can be financed.

This is the most pressing problem now before State officials. At a conference last Friday with Harry L. Hopkins, National relief administrator, the Maryland officials were informed that the Federal Government expects Maryland to provide at least half the funds necessary for relief purposes during the coming months. Mr. Hopkins added, however, that he did not wish to be arbitrary about the matter, and was willing to discuss various phases of the situation at future parleys.

Baltimore probably will have to bear most of the costs. Expenditures in the city are about 85 per cent of the State relief bill.

Father Faces Murder Charge As Youth Dies

Hagerstown Man Admits Shooting Companion of Girl on Trip.

Hagerstown, Md., June 4 (Spl.).—A formal charge of murder will be placed against Allen L. Hollar, 45, who fatally wounded George Saum, 22, father of three, after Saum had taken Hollar's 16-year-old daughter, Jane, on a week-end automobile trip a week ago. Saum died today in the Washington County Hospital from a bullet wound in the abdomen. State's Attorney Lloyd Harshman said he expected to place the charge tomorrow.

Hollar admitted the shooting, which took place near the Saum garage, and told police he had no regrets.

Saum, who was taken into custody two days after the girl's disappearance, had been held without charges until Sunday afternoon, when he was released.

The release of Saum came after a conference Saturday night in the office of State's Attorney Harshman, with Hollar present. Upon learning the facts in the girl's trip to Washington with Saum, during which, the State's attorney said, the girl had not been molested, Hollar suggested that no charges be preferred against Saum and volunteered to go to jail and shake hands with Saum.

When taken into custody at his home, where he went after cornering Saum as the latter was putting his car away, firing two shots into his body, Hollar admitted he had purchased the revolver the day he learned Saum had taken his daughter away.

The Hollar girl confirmed Saum's story that he had brought her back to Hagerstown from Washington, where she had asked him to drive her to see a cousin. She later returned to Washington alone and was found by Washington police last Thursday sitting in a car with a man on the outskirts of the Capital. Her father brought her home.

Saum, in a dying statement, told police that Hollar, upon approaching him said "I am going to kill you," and fired without further notice. Saum grappled with his assailant, took the revolver from him and threw it into a yard. He then staggered some distance, with Hollar in pursuit. Carl Smith, a neighbor of Saum, witnessed the shooting.

Authorities said that no inquest would be held.

Hollar is a native of Winchester, Va.

Turkey Profits Gain Through Virginia Pools

Prices Higher Than Those Paid Others Obtained by Members.

(This is the nineteenth of a series on the cooperative farm organizations of Virginia.)

Richmond, June 4.—Prices substantially higher than those received by nonmembers have been returned to the members of the cooperative turkey pools operating in southwest Virginia during the last three years. The Castlewood Turkey Pool and the Scott County Turkey Pool have records of outstanding accomplishments.

The Castlewood Turkey Pool started operations in the fall of 1931. The local market price was approximately 13 cents a pound, live weight. A committee of growers drew up a simple marketing agreement and 85 growers agreed to sell their turkeys through the pool. The committee obtained a price of 20 cents a pound for the birds of the members delivered to the local shipping point. Three carloads moved out at this price.

As a result of this accomplishment the pool operated in the fall of 1932 and the membership increased to 150. The sales committee again solicited competitive bids from various buyers and secured a price of 14 cents a pound cash at the car door. Local buyers had been offering 9 cents and 10 cents a pound, and at no time did the local price exceed 12 cents a pound.

Crop Small; Buyers Pleased.

The turkey crop that fall was late in maturing so that even with the larger membership only three carloads, amounting to 3,300 turkeys, were delivered to the buyer. The buyers of these pool turkeys have been very well pleased with the quality of the birds delivered by the members.

The membership of the Castlewood Turkey Pool increased to 165 in the fall of 1933. All signed a membership marketing agreement pledging to deliver to the pool all their turkeys that were ready to market at Thanksgiving and at Christmas. The agreement further authorized the committee to deduct one cent per bird from the returns received for the turkeys to cover the expenses of the pool.

The committee sold the birds in the pool for 10½ cents a pound live weight, delivered at the local shipping points and 4,400 turkeys were delivered by the members at Thanksgiving. The local price at the time the pool announced its price was 8 cents a pound. This meant that the members of the pool obtained over $1,200 more for their Thanksgiving turkeys than they would have otherwise.

Hauling Service Available.

The leaders in the organization and operation of the Castlewood Turkey Pool have been W. C. Fletcher, Ed. Mason, John Mason, Elbert Quillen and Hal Owens. For the convenience of those members who do not have the facilities for delivering their birds, the committee arranges for a truck to haul the turkeys from the farm to the freight car at a nominal charge. The agricultural instructor at the Castlewood High School, C. V. Duff, has assisted in the organization and operation of the pool.

Another turkey pool has operated in the southeastern part of the county for two seasons and has helped the growers sell their turkeys to truck buyers on a graded basis at prices above the local market. This pool has been under the leadership of L. B. Connelly, of Lebanon, formerly agricultural instructor in the high school and now county agricultural agent.

Sullivan County Wool Pool Nets High Price

Bristol, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—Sullivan County, Tenn., farmers have sold 13,000 pounds of wool in the largest annual wool pool ever held in the county.

Prices were 28½ cents for clear, 26½ cents for light burry, and 25½ cents for medium burry. These figures, according to G. C. Baker, county agricultural agent, are the highest quoted at any wool sale in Tennessee this year, except a special consignment from Jonesboro which brought as much as 29 cents for clear wool.

Coat of Arms Dug Up at Big Laurel Traced to Hessian

Big Laurel, Va., June 4 (Spl.). Workmen excavating for a bridge foundation on the Mayo Trail on Big Sandy River, found a silver coat of arms with Prussian inscription.

It is believed the arms was brought to America during the Revolution by John Hager, a Hessian soldier, who deserted the British and fought the last year under Washington. His son, Gen. Daniel Hager, was a pioneer settler on Big Sandy and built his home on the spot where the arms was unearthed.

The relic was found 20 feet below the surface. It was purchased by James W. Turner, a descendant of Gen. Hager.

Manslaughter and Drunk Driving Charged After Car Hits Two.

Parsons, W. Va., June 4 (Spl.). Charged with manslaughter and drunken driving, William Wilson Bragg, jr., 25, son of a Methodist Episcopal minister near Parsons, was a county jail prisoner here today in connection with the death of Paul Hehle, 28, who was struck by an automobile yesterday on a highway near here. A fellow pedestrian, Manzel Hull, 25, employed by the same company, was also hit and injured, but not seriously.

According to State police, Bragg's car sped on and he was arrested several hours later when he drove through Parsons with Miss Beatrice Trippett, of Hamilton, whom he said he had planned to marry today. She reported at the county jail late today and admitted, police said, that she was driving the car. Both denied striking any one, but said their car had smashed into a fence.

Hehle was dragged some distance before his mangled body was thrown to the roadside. Bragg's case was taken directly to the grand jury, which was in session today.

Baltimore, June 4, (Spl.).—Claude Carrier, 19, high-school student, was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $35 here today on charges of reckless driving, drunken driving, and operating an automobile on an expired District of Columbia license.

The auto was reported stolen May 31 by Washington police. A detainer was placed against Carrier by metropolitan police after he was sentenced.

Carrier was arrested Saturday on the Washington boulevard after he had led State and city police a chase over several highways in the southwestern section of the city and in the county. Patrolman Edward Dunn, of the traffic division, said he was forced to strike Carrier with a blackjack to subdue him. Carrier said he lived with an aunt in Baltimore, and had another home on the Columbia pike near Washington.

Hodges to Run Again Despite Rotation Rule

Morgantown, W. Va., June 4 (Spl.). Although a stiff fight is on for continued observance of a rule of rotation followed for the last 34-years, Senator Charles E. Hodges, of Morgantown, has made formal announcement of his candidacy for re-election in the eleventh senatorial district. He is a Democrat and a leader of the progressive wing of his party in the last several sessions of the legislature.

Under the rule of rotation, Taylor County is entitled to the senatorship this year. The district includes that county, Monongalia and Marion, the last-named being represented by Senator Earl H. Smith, of Fairmont, the holdover member.

G. O. P. Enters Second Virginia Congress Race

Convention Set July 14 at Princess Anne to Nominate.

Norfolk, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—Republicans of the Second District will meet in convention at Princess Anne Courthouse July 14 to nominate a candidate for Congress.

The date for the convention was set and a decision to put a candidate in the race was made by the Second District Republican committee in session here. Representatives from all parts of the district agreed to make an intensive campaign.

James M. Wolcott and Gerould M. Rumble, of Norfolk, appeared as leading prospects for the nomination. Some committee members expressed a desire to see L. C. Page, lately retired as postmaster at Norfolk, nominated for Congress, but Page stated he would not be interested.

Former Representative Menalcus Lankford presided in the absence of the chairman, Lester S. Parsons. Lankford is mentioned as a possible candidate himself in 1936, but to date he has not entered the 1934 race.

The meeting here was a sequel to a meeting of Republican women from all over the State in Richmond, May 29, when considerable optimism was expressed by leading Republicans who foresaw a rebuilding of the party's organization after its defeat in 1932.

Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., probably will be unopposed for the Democratic nomination. The time limit for filing notices of candidacy expires June 7.

Mr. Lankford's participation in the deliberations of the district committee was regarded as indicating his prospective return to active leadership of his party. Many party leaders in the district are anxious that he be prepared to run for Congress in 1936.

Danville Ministerial Group Hits Rum Sale

Danville, Va., June 4 (Spl.). Strong disapproval of a liquor dispensary in Danville was voiced today at the final summer meeting of the Danville Ministerial Association.

Resolutions offered by the Rev. A. K. Yount, Lutheran pastor, and adopted unanimously, deplored "the effort to bring into our community the liquor traffic for the hollow economic advantage claimed," and called upon the citizenship to "refrain from popularizing liquor." A local option campaign is in full swing here.

Cabbage Growers Triple Their Profit

Marion, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—The Tri-County Cabbage Growers Association, organized last year and operated under a marketing agreement with the four established sales agencies, handled more than 14,000,000 pounds of cabbage, which netted 1,200 growers approximately $150,000, according to the records submitted by P. E. Bird, county agricultural agent and secretary of the association. The cabbage produced last year in this area, which comprises Smyth and parts of netted the growers $100,625—more than their 1932 crop.

At a meeting yesterday at Rural Retreat, the directors of the association entered into a marketing agreement with the same four sales agencies, the Southwest Virginia Cooperative Exchange, the Independent Produce Shippers, Inc.; C. E. Davis and E. H. Phillipi, to handle this year's crop.

John L. Brown, of Rural Retreat, is president of the association; P. E. Bird, of Marion, secretary; Ned Jones, of Wytheville, assistant secretary, and John L. Brown, of Rural Retreat; P. K. Copenhaver, of Crockett; Frank E. Hash, of Atkins; W. M. Hull, of Marion, and George W. Duncan, of Chilhowie, managing directors.

At Chicago.

Election of a successor to Everett Sanders as chairman of the Republican National committee marks the first formal effort to reconstruct the Republican party since the whirlwind of 1932. Political parties, like other armies, are incapable of functioning effectively without organization and leadership. Their National officers form a general staff. Upon their character and competence depends in large degree the success of the cause they represent.

However, there is some disposition to exaggerate the importance of the gathering of Republican National committee members in Chicago at this time. Undoubtedly the event will add an interesting chapter to political history. The movement to rehabilitate the Republican party on a National scale, nearly two years after devastating defeat, foreshadows the marshaling of party hosts for renewed battle. Nevertheless, the selection of a general staff is only a preliminary to more important decisions. Party chairmen are not commanders-in-chief. Their task is primarily that of recruiting and financing. They reflect rather than originate party policy.

It is, of course, true that the chairman of the "outs" is more responsible for development of party policy than the chairman of the "ins," whose guidance comes from the incumbent President. It is also true that the Republican party will be widely judged publicly, or at least politically, by the type of general staff installed at this juncture. Even so, the hour, while overdue for Republican reorganization, is scarcely ripe for final formulation of National policy and specific commitment on a number of vital issues. For one thing, events are still moving too swiftly, the National scene is too chaotic, and political leaders, irrespective of party, are as yet too much confused.

Interesting and significant, politically, as the choice of National staff officers is, much more important to the country is the subsequent development of the Republican program and the selection of issues which will be determined by forces and events beyond the control of a chairman or any small group of party leaders.

No Code Needed.

There will be no circus code because the NRA has decided that it is not a big business after all!

This is the greatest paradox of the whole NRA and one which bears examination. There are strong intimations that the NRA gave up trying to codify the circuses when it was confronted by the dilemma of establishing "fair competition" among the many fattest ladies in the world. If so, why the insinuation that the circus business is not big enough for a code?

Dexter Fellows should protest. Not a big business, indeed! This is the most un-American thing we have heard in a long time. Are there no traditions left?

Ever since its earliest days the circus has been not only the biggest show on earth but the most stupendous, the most colossal, the most overwhelming, the most magnificent spectacle in all the world. For one dime, one lone, thin dime, two nickels, the tenth part of a dollar, ladies and gentlemen, we could prove to you that the circus is big business. All fat ladies, naturally, are the fattest; all thin men, the thinnest; all sword swallowers the most expert; all lemonade most pink. And yet the most superlative of superlative conglomerations of this and that, imported from Borneo and the capitals of Europe, applauded by kings and queens, and the rave of the Riviera, ladies and gentlemen, is not a big business?

It is an insult to the American people. It's so big it doesn't need your old code!

Week-End Warning.

Once again the long roll-call of summer drownings has begun. Each week-end will all too probably add tragedy to the list.

Summer after summer goes by and still each vacation center continues to claim its victims. It seems futile once again to say this, to cloud the blitheness of excursions with nervous admonitions of the traps and pitfalls that await all who step into a canoe, go swimming in unfamiliar waters, take those unnecessary chances that swimmers and bathers seem never to learn to forego. But in a city as blessed with accessible beaches as is Washington the subject is not superfluous.

Remember, when next you step into a canoe, that even in the hands of an expert the frail craft is dangerous if its proper uses are abused. Remember, when next you don a bathing suit, that it is only "smart" to take chances, to overtax your strength, if it is "smart" to be pulled unconscious from the water.

All deaths of the week-end or vacation period are not caused by over-exuberance. Some are inevitable and beyond human control. But too often daring, chance-taking and neglect of proper precautions underlie the fatality. A funeral on Monday is a sorry sequel to the dive into shallow water on Sunday.

Superfluous And Undesirable.

Quiet reigns in Minneapolis, where two weeks ago striking teamsters and policemen were busily splitting each other's heads. In Toledo, where Communist-inspired rioting threatened even more serious results, the general strike threat has been averted and amicable settlement of the local disputes is foreshadowed. The projected strike of cotton textile workers has also been called off and the threatened steel strike, on which Gen. Hugh Johnson is concentrating his notable skill as a conciliator, remains at the moment the only really dangerous cloud on the industrial horizon.

The relative ease with which several serious controversies have yielded to earnest efforts to find solutions is thought-provoking. Evidence of what conciliatory and cooperative attitudes can accomplish should end the ill-considered drive to rush the Wagner labor disputes bill into law at the present session of Congress. With that sublime national faith in the curative effects of legislation which not even the history of prohibition could eliminate, recent strikes have been widely heralded as proof positive that the Wagner bill is desirable. The argument is even more ingenuous than that employed by the general superintendent of the Antisaloon League, who does not seem interested in the Wagner bill, yet asserts that recent industrial rioting is "but another of the regrettable consequences of repeal."

Aside from its specific defects, that which makes the Wagner bill particularly undesirable at this time is its placid assumption that the evolution of industrial organization should be caught at an obviously embryonic stage and arbitrarily stereotyped by law. At this time nobody knows for certain what line of development labor organization in this country will naturally follow in the future. Every thinking person recognizes the potential virtues of unionism; recognizes also that unionism should be cooperative with rather than dominated by, or dominant over, management. But whether the traditional craft unionism, with its perpetual jurisdictional disputes and other serious defects, is the desirable form of the future is by no means certain.

The character and set-up of NRA, for instance, indicate that industrial unions may be theoretically a more logical form of organization. If so, the company union, for all the vicious denunciation heaped upon it, is a thoroughly appropriate unit on which to build. Yet the tacit intention, and the probable outcome, of the Wagner bill would be to eliminate the virtues along with the vices of the company union and to freeze the possibly archaic character of the craft union on the structure of American industry.

This fundamental shortcoming helps to explain why far-sighted labor spokesmen are in many cases almost as skeptical of the proposed legislation as those industrialists who feel that the Wagner bill would unduly interfere with desirable prerogatives of management. Close examination reveals that the measure is worse than a poor substitute for that industrial self-government which enlightened social policy seeks to forward. It is an actual menace to the further development of self-government in industry, projected at a time when the prospects for that development, assuming a constructive attitude in the steel industry, are unusually favorable.

That Three Per Cent Rate.

The Treasury offering of a moderate-sized bond issue, carrying a rate of 3 per cent, is welcome evidence of an intention to proceed with the funding of the unwieldy floating debt. Already the low interest charge is being interpreted as a sign that investment confidence has not been shaken by the heavy spending program of the Administration and the continued tinkering with the currency.

It would be a great mistake, however, to accept this easy assumption that a low interest rate is proof that the credit status of the Government is growing better day by day. Such a conclusion takes no account of the abnormal conditions now existing in the capital markets of the United States and the rest of the world. A well-known European financial expert, Dr. Palyi, recently called attention to the fact that interest rates have been falling in the bankrupt States of central and eastern Europe more rapidly than in gold standard countries. "Indeed," he said, "the latter are almost the only countries which have not yet been able (or only to a limited extent) to convert their debts to lower interest rates."

This paradoxical situation is due to the effects of restrictive monetary policies that deprive prospective investors of profitable outlets for employment of capital in private enterprise. Unused funds pile up and short-term interest rates are artificially lowered by credit policies which make money cheap. As a result, many countries poor in capital, and countries in which public confidence in the political and economic stability of the government is at low ebb, are, notwithstanding, able to borrow on exceptionally favorable terms.

The situation of the United States differs, of course, in many respects from that of the countries of central Europe. We resemble them, however, in having placed legislative obstructions in the way of a revival of the private capital market. And here, though with far less excuse, the Government has consequently acquired a similarly dominant position as borrower.

Under such abnormal conditions, the current rate of interest on public securities ceases to be a trustworthy measure of the degree of confidence which the investor reposes in the borrower. The rate at which loans can be floated depends chiefly upon the manipulative success with which borrowing operations are carried out, not upon the attitude of the investor or the relative abundance or scarcity of surplus funds available for investment.

The Socialist Convention.

Despite strong denunciation of war, indorsement of the general strike as a weapon against it, and denunciation of the "bogus democracy of capitalist parliamentarianism," it remains to be seen whether the convention of the Socialist Party at Detroit has accomplished anything that will further the cause of political radicalism in this country. At the end of the convention Norman Thomas found himself victor in a three-cornered battle for control. But he left the party split into three factions. On one side are the resentful members of the right, the moderates who see what is involved in soap-box denunciation of democracy. On the other are the extremists, on the verge of throwing themselves into the Communist ranks. In the middle are the Thomas radicals, trying to keep one foot in the evolutionary and one in the revolutionary camps.

It is not surprising that the radicals should have won. Although their persuasive and articulate leader denies in his recent book, "The Choice Before Us," that the Roosevelt Administration has done anything (except setting up of the TVA) worthy of the admiration of Socialists, the trend has been socialistic enough to take much wind out of that party's sails. So it behooved Mr. Thomas, who is no fledgling in politics, to drive his party far beyond New Deal concepts. It is in the nature of Socialist politics that he could not drive it far enough to please the more ardent party members. For a cardinal belief with many of that affiliation is that one must be to the left of whatever point the organization regards as the ultimate.

With shrewd political skill Mr. Thomas has saved the party of which he is titular head from being swallowed by the socialistic swing of Rooseveltian democracy. And he has saved it just a little short of surrender to the eager Communists. But in the process he has encouraged a factionalism likely to destroy a party unity never any too strong. And in his surrender to recklessly bombastic phrases he has, in the words of one party delegate, encouraged "a lot of fools to perform illegal acts."

Russian Gold.

Russia has now passed both the United States and Canada as a gold producer, and so stands second only to the Transvaal in this respect. At one time the world might have been excited by this announcement, hoping that it would relieve the alleged shortage of monetary gold about which so much was being said not long ago. Today few people are worried about the imaginary deficiencies of the world's gold supplies. We except advocates of bimetallism, who would find their occupation gone if they conceded the sufficiency of existing gold supplies.

Last year it is estimated that the world output of newly mined gold attained a record high figure of 2,648,000,000 Swiss francs, as compared with 2,595,000,000 Swiss francs in 1932. Gold stocks have not only been augmented by these heavy current additions, but shipments from India and China have swollen the total amounts of gold available for monetary employment. Of late, the gold reserves of central banks and governments have not shown the effects of these current increases, which appear to have been offset by private hoarding. However, central monetary reserves are already abnormally large, and they increased slightly during the year. Although monetary reserves are badly distributed, they are capable of supporting a credit structure vastly greater than that now existing.

In view of the economies achieved in the use of gold under modern monetary and credit systems, and considering, too, the large amounts of hoarded gold which will eventually come out of hiding, fears of a gold shortage are baseless. Nevertheless, the world's hunger for gold appears to be insatiable and Russia will find in the development of her gold mines a support for her domestic currency system as well as a means of paying for much-needed imports.

To May Or Not To May Toes.

This, we learn from our ever wide-awake Woman's Page, is National Tomato Week. Inasmuch as tomatoes are a subject upon which we feel very deeply, we can not let the week go unnoticed, although we are as greatly opposed to "weeks" as we are favorable to more and better tomatoes.

Perhaps it is reckless, in this city of accents and shades of accents, to bring up the subject. But when we said we favored tomatoes we said, whether you heard it that way or not, tomaytoes. Somehow or other the flavor goes from the succulent fruit when they are called tomahtoes. The tang of the fruit and the twang of pronunciation go together.

This, we know, is a delicate subject and here, on the fringe of the soft-spoken South, it takes courage to stand up for tomayto. But stand we do, for good, red, juicy tomaytoes, with the skin left on. Rather, almost, would we have them called tomahtoes (although it costs a shudder even to write it) than to have them subjected to boiling water and their skins removed. Such procedure is barbaric, even as peeling an apple is hardly in good taste among those who know their fruit.

No, tomaytoes should be served as they come from the vine, quartered and served with salt and pepper, although the truly initiate will forego the spices and even eat them warm from the sun. Best of all is to pick them in the cool of morning, wipe off the dew, and eat them au naturel while drinking in the sweet flower-scented air and listening to the birdies. Again, at eventide, they may be eaten with generous dousing of French (and no other) dressing, which has been subjected to the purging influence of a section of garlic.

But never should they be called tomahtoes. However you eat them, pronounce them right. In Dixie Land we take our stand—to-MAY-toes!

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Robert Somers Brookings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having begun the collection of biographical material relating to the life and public services of my late husband, Robert Somers Brookings, I take the liberty of inquiring whether any of your readers would be in a position to furnish material of this character, either in the form of letters or of their recollections of matters which brought them into personal contact with Mr. Brookings. Specifically, material coming under any of the following heads would be highly appreciated:

1. Correspondence with Mr. Brookings (not necessarily for publication), including letters to and from him, the former being sometimes necessary for an understanding of references and comments made in Mr. Brookings' letters. Any letters received would be copied and the originals returned. The use of letters written to him would be subject to any restrictions imposed by the sender.

2. Recollections of episodes in Mr. Brookings' career or of personal contacts with him, with references to pertinent documentary material if it is available.

3. Personal impressions and characterizations of Mr. Brookings; also remembered sayings of his, not necessarily for quotation, except where the interest of the subject matter and the known accuracy of quotations would make their inclusion appropriate.

4. References to other persons and sources of information to which the biographer might be recommended.

Any information and material which your readers may feel prompted to contribute in response to this request should be addressed to Mrs. Robert S. Brookings, at the Brookings Institution, 722 Jackson place, Washington, D. C.

In Praise of Dr. Elderman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I convey to you my hearty thanks for the complimentary copies of The Post which I have been receiving, although you have not heard the half of what I have to tell you about the cartoon in The Post this morning, "The Retreat from Moscow." I wish that I could meet the cartoonist who sketched it; I wish to thank him also.

For anyone to understand the emotional expressive mood that cartoon got me into, it is necessary to give part of my biography, which makes it somewhat embarrassing to me. I happen to be a veteran of the World War, having served 18 months in France, at the front and not back. I also happen to be disabled therefrom, to the extent that I can not do all kinds of work, and jobs are so scarce nowadays, that there seems to be no special ones to pick from. Therefore, I have been a shut-in for a year, with spirits, nerves and parts of the anatomy shattered. But that cartoon did me more good than any doctor or friend that has called to see me, in the last year.

I do not say this because of prejudice against the NRA as I don't know enough about NRA or politics to feel thusly, but I was so amused when I saw that cartoon, with that expression and the tin hat cocked on one side—well I laughed until I cried and began to have a pain in my stomach—you know, like we boys used to in France at the front when we were real scared (no not frightened) that would have been too good English there. However, I felt good after that pain. Now please, is possible, let Mr. Elderman know he did one human animal some good.

In closing I again thank the gentlemen of The Post, for making it possible to see that cartoon. Now please don't ask me to subscribe to The Post, which I would like to do very much. I am not financially able, but guarantee you whenever I have a few pennies to spare, I shall purchase copies of The Post. GEORGE BAKER.

Vibrant Handicap!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Capt. Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codas were certainly up against it when they began to show off in New York. I can understand the vibrating wing most readily.

Many years ago I used to go out in the country in the winter, and of course we burned oil lamps. The folks had an organ in the parlor and the vibrations from that old organ broke the lamp chimney. We could not play it at night.

As Others See It.

The Debt Message

The Presidential recapitulation brings the world no nearer to a solution of the war debt problem. Even the June 15 payment is shrouded in uncertainty. The token payers must now take fresh stock of the situation as that situation has been changed by the Johnson act. If they are to be dubbed defaulters along with the defaulters proper, why should they bother to make token payments any longer? They might make them in order to satisfy their own scruples. But it can not be sufficiently emphasized that such scruples are more legal than moral. There is just as much moral feeling in, say, Great Britain that nonpayment would be justifiable as there is in the United States that it would be unjustifiable. This is the tragedy of the war debts—two concepts of right come in head-on conflict.

On the American side there is the Coolidge approach, "They hired the money, didn't they?" This regards the war debt as equivalent to a commercial debt. Such a view is plainly untenable. War debts are unlike commercial debts in that they are contracted for no constructive purpose. In other words, they do not provide the means for their own liquidation, as is the case, for example, with a loan to build a railroad. The line brings in revenue, and this revenue not only pays the interest on the debt, but also amortizes it. War debts were raised solely to buy such consumables as food and clothing and munitions—bought, incidentally, in the United States at war prices. When they were gone, nothing was left with which to pay the loan. Yet the fact remains that the money was "hired."

It is clear, however, that the money was hired in pursuit of a common purpose. Let us imagine a private debt between friends in behalf of a common cause. What would be the terms of the loan? Surely, in such circumstances, the lender would be content with the return of the principal. Interest on such an obligation would savor of Shylockism, no matter how low the rate. In the case of the war loans, no interest should have been charged at all.

The argument is all the more potent when one considers what the allies were doing with their American dollars. They were fighting a nation which had become America's enemy. The United States declared war against Germany on April 7, 1917. Not for 15 months afterward, however, did the United States get into the fighting. Who did America's fighting till then? The allies, of course. "If it had not been that the Allies were able to hold the lines for 15 months after we entered the war," Gen. Pershing says, "held them with the support of the loans we had made, the war might well have been lost."

This service should have been assessed during the discussion of the war debts and applied as an offset to the book value of the loans. To the Frenchman the logic was inescapable. "Is a dead Frenchman worth less than a can of bullybeef?" he exclaimed, bitterly. Nothing was said under this head, however, during the war debt discussions, which ended in new settlements. That was the great mistake. None of the arguments advanced above are legally valid in the light of the fresh signatures that the debtor nations attached to the funding arrangements. Yet nothing which is basically unjust can be made just solely by a signature applied to arrangements which were reached under the duress of the harassed post-war years. The settlements should certainly be reopened.

This is what the President would do. How far he would go is a different matter. But a stumbling block even greater than the extent of revision is Congressional opposition to any revision at all. Congress has never shown any sign of backing down from its resolution of December, 1931, opposing any reduction in the debts.

It would have been better politics for the war debtors to make public any offer they have made. Then Americans could have judged whether it was reasonable. If it had been adjudged reasonable, the adamantine attitude of Congress might have been broken down. For it would seem that the country as a whole is more sympathetic toward revision than Congress is. The poll that the Monitor conducted last year of the opinion of newspaper editors surely was a sign of pro-revision opinion. It is not even now too late to begin again the search for a compromise. The quest would be helped and the acerbities assuaged if both sides would recall that the debts were contracted between friends.

Patriotism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Patriotism, when tempered by intelligence, fairness, and good taste, is a great and glorious state of mind and emotion. Such patriotism was once our strength and our virtue. It drew the best from all our people and it attracted to the heights of glory all the great women and men, whose names, let us hope, still constitute the pillars of our house of state and society. Such a patriotism enabled us to meet economic, social, political and military crises with valor, confidence and pride.

Today our patriotism has sickened to a state where it means only uncontrolled emotion, petty prejudices and bad taste. Instead of a great vision that sees the wholeness of the world, we have only a narrow stare that sees no further than our narrow lives. Instead of confidence based upon faith and foresight, we have only a wild daring on the one hand and a killing despondency on the other. Instead of valor, we have only rashness; instead of courage, only fatalism.

Shall we go down as merely a gap in the otherwise thrilling and glorious pageant of mankind?

"Home, Sweet Home."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I point out that Senator Clarence Dill was either misinformed or misquoted in the report of the service honoring Payne. Payne was the author of the words of "Home, Sweet Home," but the music was composed by Henry Bishop, which he introduced into an opera entitled "Maid Marian and Clari."

The Post Impressionist

"Song Hits"—And Misses.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

"YOU have been complaining," writes Juan Donovan—always quick on the uptake—"that poker has passed out of our national life. Haven't you noticed the passage of another national institution? The 'popular song,' as the United States knew it, was just as 'great' (in its hold on the popular taste) and just as American as poker ever was, yet the popular song is at this moment fading before our very eyes—or ears."

Our first reaction to this news was that, if true, we could bear it.

Did you ever find a "Song Album" of the late Eighties or early Nineties in the attic and hum over its most brilliant gems? "Down Went McGinty" exemplified the period's sense of humor. "Little Annie Rooney" and "After the Ball" typified its ideas of the love-song and the song of sentiment.

Still, when we came to think of it, there was an advance of sorts in the next two decades. There is still a smile, if not a laugh, in "Waiting at the Church," "Rings on My Fingers" and "Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay." The sentiment of "School Days" wears well, the sentimentality—call it good or bad—of "Mother Machree" is perennial. "The Easter Parade" has even survived revival, and we admit a sneaking tenderness for "The Good Old Summertime."

About the World War songs there are only two views: the extremes. Severe youth declares that this conflict produced no good song—as, indeed, why should it, or how could it? Mellow middle age, beginning to be reminiscent now, believes that "Smiles," "Let the World Go By," "Over There," and "Joan of Arc" are valuable as part and parcel of A. E. F. history—as indeed they are. They are every bit as good as the Sixties' "Just Before the Battle, Mother," anyhow. . .

Well, when our reactions got that far, we began to remember yet another national loss. We began to remember the late lamented "musical comedy" and its lyrics.

And we weren't so sure about our first reaction.

Perhaps popular songs, both words and music, are always below the esthetic high-water mark of the period producing them—because only the top water ever reaches the high-water mark. Perhaps their worth should be measured by the degree to which they express their epoch.

Yet, in that case, two awkward questions arise: Do songs like "Hold Your Man" and "As You Desire Me," express our present? And, if they do, is our present worth—well, we won't say "expression," but "preservation?"

Deftly steering our frail barque of inquiry away from that controversial Scylla and Charybdis, let us hold that the question is everywhere individual and that one's feeling for a popular song has little to do with either esthetics or its morals. Let us say that personal association is what damns or endears any such song to any survivor of its popularity. Let us say that, granted it has certain superficial qualities, you like it if you first heard and sang it in propitious circumstances—and that you like it if it recalls times which, even were they before your own time, contain an appeal to you. The fact remains that a song, to be popular, must be singable.

And Mr. Donovan thinks that the singable song has left us.

Kenneth S. Clark, master of community singing, recently advanced, in The Forum, a similar charge: What songs of the last ten years, he asked, will we, if alive ten years hence, care then to recall? And, he vows, stumped Echo answers, "What?"

For, says he, the radio has assassinated the element of song popularity. And the contemporary song is, so far as the average voice goes, losing all is "singability."

Mr. Clark says the radio kills songs by overworking them. "Before radio, song-hits might endure to a sales-life of 16 months, but at the present the best of them have only three months."

He continues: "Next to radio, and growing out of it, our present passivity with regard to performing music is possibly the greatest reason why few songs of today will linger. Few of us play or sing any more—we let George (or Rudy or (Bing) sing for us."

And too many of our contemporary songs "are entirely too intricate. Little Nellie Green, of Main Street, chief buyer of popular music, can neither play nor sing them. . . . Too many of the lads who now write songs . . . know what modulation means and are expert in broken rhythms. The result is a 'Body and Soul' with which Nellie Green would have a terrible time. . . .

"Take any vocally inclined group of persons who were adults before the war and pit them against a similar group of the present generation. Let each group sing, without recourse to the printed music, ten songs chosen by it from the hits of its period—and see which singing exhibits more real joie de vivre. That is, if the younger generation knows ten songs of this period"

That's what Mr. Clark thinks, anyhow.

Lonesome Crack-Down.

THERE is some basis for the impression that the real reason for Crack-Down Johnson's hysteria is his realization that he is all alone in the New Deal, that, aside from the White House, there are any number of people hereabouts who would like to see him and his NRA get the gate. I think he is really venting his feelings against them when he hollers and hurls imprecations at Ogden Mills and other critics. Although he directs his shafts at these critics, his feeling is, I think, really against those right here in the New Deal.

BARGERON.

Good or bad as his NRA undertaking may be, it has no part in the plans of the Brain Trust, the New Dealers or whatever they may be called. As a matter of fact, it runs exactly counter to their schemes. It is a thing apart, over there in the Commerce Building without a friend, apparently, except Mr. Roosevelt.

* * * *

He is a formidable enough friend to have, of course, but the attitude of the others must keep Crack-Down awake at nights. At the very minute he is tossing in disturbed rest they may be at the White House telling Mr. Roosevelt that the NRA is a load from which he should get under as gracefully as he can.

Why, only a few weeks ago, Mrs. Ickes wouldn't go out to Illinois to help the Democrats put over a State NRA. Crack-Down wants as many State laws as possible, of course, to support the thing he is trying to administer. I understand they finally succeeded in getting the Illinois NRA, but there was a time when Mrs. Ickes' vote was sorely needed. In vain did the Democrats plead with her to come out to their assistance. She is a member of the Legislature.

* * * *

I would surmise from this that the Ickes do not consider the NRA as important, at least, as does Crack-Down. It is but another example, I think, of Johnson's lonesomeness around here. There was a time, I recall, when over at the NRA they were blaming Ickes' failure to get his building program under way for the trouble the NRA was having, and the Ickes' crowd were muttering unkind things about the NRA.

Nothing would be more of a surprise around here, of course, than for the NRA and AAA to go out together. Not once have they been seen in public together since they were enacted in the same bill. This being in the same bill is apparently all they have in common. It may be that intimacy which causes them to hate each other so much.

Mr. Ickes' PWA is in that same bill, too. The NRA bill in Illinois very likely didn't have any provision for a public works' program so that may be the reason Mrs. Ickes didn't consider it needed her vote.

At any rate, I don't suppose our lawmakers have ever thrown so discordant elements together as they did when they created the NRA, the AAA and the PWA in the same bill. They act like relatives, fighting as they do.

* * * *

Something not apparent explains Johnson's intemperance of remarks, that's a cinch. The funniest thing about him and his crony, Donald Richberg, is that they always admit the justification of the criticism.

Their course is to shout bum, liar, thief, scalawag, scoundrel and everything under the sun at their critics and then add:

"And not only that, but we knew about the conditions against which you complain all the time. We are doing everything to correct them."

Frankly, I can't recall a single complaint they have really denied. Let's see, there is the charge of monopoly. Rascal, thunderbund, corporal of disaster, is he who mentions it! And, besides his being this, "we" are moving to correct the evils, "we've known all the time they exist."

If they would set up some sort of an agency here to keep Crack-Down company so he wouldn't feel so lonesome, I believe he would improve.

If It's 'Inflamation,' Who Got Mr. Headquarters' Letters?

Woman Didn't Know Her Husband Had Middle Name, but She Was Sure It Was Not "None," She Writes Bureau.

Boners pulled by college students and grammar school pupils have afforded many a chuckle, but members of Congress and Veterans' Administration officials have learned that pulling a boner is the prerogative of others as well.

Often there is pathos mixed with the humor of ill-phrased letters among the thousands received from veterans and members of their families. One woman confided:

"I am left with a child seven months old and she is a baby & can't work."

The awe due an official paper from Uncle Sam might have been reflected in the comment of another woman who wrote: "I did not know my husband had a middle name, and if he did, I don't think it was 'None.'"

Just a Poor Widow.

"I have already written to Mr. Headquarters and received no reply," wrote another, "and if I don't get one from you I am going to write Uncle Sam hisself. I am a poor widow and all I have is on the front."

Culled from the thousands of letters which pour into Washington are the following:

"I ain't got no book learnin' and I hope I am writin' for inflammation."

"She is staying at a dissipated house."

"Just a line to let you know that I am a widow and four children."

"Previous to his departure we were married to a justice of the peace."

"He was inducted into the surface."

"I have a 4-months-old baby and he is my only support."

"A loan woman and parsely dependent."

"I was discharged from the Army for a goiter which I sent home for."

"As I need his assistance to keep me inclosed (in clothes)."

"Owing to my condition which I haven't walked in three months for a broke leg which is No. 75.

"Kind sir or she:

"I received $61 and I am certainly provoked tonight.

"Your relationship to him? Answer. Just a mere aunt and a few cousins."

"In service with the U. S. Armory."

"I received my insurance polish and have since moved my postoffice."

"I am his wife and only air."

Correct My Name.

"You ask for my allotment number. I have four boys and two girls."

"Please correct my name, as I could not and would not go under a consumed name."

Extract from a letter from a boy to his mother: "I am writing in the Y. M. C. A. with the piano playing in my uniform."

To whom it may concern—Please return my marriage certificate, baby hasn't eaten in three days.

Now Mrs. Wilson, I need help bad, see if the President can't help me. I need him to see after me.

Both sides of our parents are old and poor.

I have been in bed 13 years with one doctor and I intend to try another one.

"We have your letter. I am his grandfather and grandmother and he has been kept and bred in this house according to your instructions.

"I ain't received my husband's pay and will be forced to lead an immortal life.

"Please let me know if John has put in an application for a wife and child.

"I am writing to ask why I have not received my elopement. His money was kept from him for the elopement which I never received.

"You have taken my man away to fight and he was the best fighter I ever had. Now you will have to keep me or who in hell will if you don't?

"My boy has been put in charge of a spitoon (platoon). Will I get more money?"

New Plane Carrier Joins Navy In Colorful Norfolk Ceremony

Several Thousand Take Part in Ranger Rites.

Norfolk, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—In a colorful ceremony, in which officers of the Norfolk naval operating base, the navy yard and various ships and several thousand enlisted men took part, the new airplane carrier Ranger today became a unit of the Navy.

The vessel, just completed at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., arrived at the base about 8:30 a. m., and by 10:30 she had been listed among the Navy's active ships.

Homer L. Ferguson, president of the shipbuilding company, delivered the vessel to Rear Admiral Arthur St. Clair Smith, acting commandant of the Norfolk Naval District, who represented the Navy Department. He in turn delivered her to Capt. Arthur L. Bristol, jr., who ran up his flag, set watches and declared the ship regularly in commission.

While this ceremony was going on, a detail of marines and sailors stood at attention at pier 7, where the big vessel was berthed. The Ranger will remain here until about June 18, when she is to proceed to the navy yard for minor adjustments and later will join the fleet off New York.

Nearly 1,000 officers and enlisted men were aboard the Ranger when she went into commission, and the remainder of her complement, expected to reach 1,300, will be added from time to time.

Of slightly more than 12,000 tons, the Ranger developed a cruising speed of 29½ knots and maximum test of 34 knots on her trial trip off the coast of Maine last month.

Among the ranking officers at the ceremony were Rear Admiral Cheatham, former paymaster general of the Navy and now supply officer of the district; Capt. W. K. Riddle, Capt. B. C. Allen, acting commandant of the base; Capt. A. W. Fitch, commandant of the naval air station, and Capt. Forde A. Todd, commanding the U. S. S. Idaho.

Richmond, Va., June 4 (Spl.).—Railroad detectives and county officers today were hoping for the early arrest of persons who attempted to wreck a Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad train Saturday night 4 miles south of Fredericksburg.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Papa, What's an Embargo?

IF you yourself are confused in the flux and flow of these strange times, how are you going to answer children who ask you to lay down the Law and the Prophets?

THEO. HALL.

Take a simple thing like a $5 gold piece. Perhaps, in your dewy days, you held one in your chubby palm and knew with awe in your heart that you had there the absolute token of secure affluence. Not in those words, of course. You said: "Golly! Here's all the money in the world!"

Now suppose, two Christmases ago, you gave your child one. (You'll forgive the rhetorical question?) Then last Christmas said youngster expected another and hinted pretty plainly about the matter. Well, what did you tell him?

* * * *

I hope I'm not implying that you'll find a trick set of questions and answers for little New Dealers in "Children of the New Day" (Appleton-Century, $2.25) by Katherine Glover and Evelyn Dewey. It's rather more intelligent than that.

The authors realize, first of all, that the average home has made a startling change in the last generation. Where once it was largely ruled by the father, the baton has changed hands. Often both parents work, often enough the wife only. The home has shrunk in size, and is usually worked by push buttons instead of elbow grease. A child once learned how to wield a broom; now it learns the technique of floor plugs. The community has almost as strong a hand on the modern child as the home has. The child most likely is born in a hospital, has no front yard to play in, finds his amusements in commercial products, and is watched over by the school doctor, the public clinician, and a psychiatrist or two Even without bringing in the gold embargo, the picture seems sufficiently complicated.

* * * *

So the authors tackle the problem, on lines laid down by President Hoover's White House conference on child health and protection in 1930 and 1931. They start with a fundamental humility—"Perhaps the only real gift we can pass on to the children today is an awareness." But then, building up through the growth of the child's physique, mentality, emotions and habits, all of which they discuss with care, they approach formal and informal education.

Education and life are interactive, they assert, and they enumerate the main threads of both at the present time—

"The recognition of democracy of opportunity as essential to a democratic society;

"The determination of human beings to be the masters of, instead of being dominated by, the material circumstances of life;

"The recognition of power harnessed to machines and engines as a means of releasing individuals from physical toil to the cultivation of higher ends;

"The expanding services of science to deliver to man a knowledge of himself and his universe and a consequent power over both;

"A transfer of faith in force, for the accomplishment of ends, to faith in education;

"The acceptance of leisure not for the privileged few but for the many and the enlargement of the capacities for enjoyment of it;

"The determination of man to defeat disease and be well; to defeat poverty and enjoy a reasonable division of health."

* * * *

I wonder if you are astonished by all that as I am. These are for children, remember, not for a college class in sociology. But where is the old "Beauty truth—truth beauty formula? Where is morality, where are manners and decorum? Where is religion? (Though I do the authors an injustice not to add that farther along they recognize "spiritual force as motivating not only material development but the whole of life.")

Well, my astonishment is really one of delight. For it seems to me, in all seriousness, that the graces just mentioned can be enjoyed in this present world only by a purblind and very conscious ostrich-head-in-the-sand act. There is a lot to be done before the truth will be beautiful. I should be glad if children were taught a better honesty than their fathers'.

Oil Strikes Starts Boom Near Stumptown, W. Va.

Va., June 4 (Spl.).—An oil development boom is starting in Gilmer County as the result of the unexpected strike of a gusher in an old gas well on the Blackshere tract on Strange Creek, near Stumptown. The big producer was brought in a week ago by the Godfrey L. Cabot Co., Inc., of Boston, and it was reported as flowing at the rate of a barrel a minute.

THEODORE CHRISTIANSON, Representative from Minnesota. Former reform Governor of Minnesota, three terms, 1925-1931, he was elected to the Seventy-third Congress, 1932, from a State represented by five Farmer-Laborites, three Republicans and one lone Democrat. While chief executive of the grain State he stolidly, rigorously and effectively pursued Republican policies with a dash of reform along the criminal line for which he still retains a reluctant fondness. Farm born 50 years ago at Lac qui Parle, Minn., he practiced law, then journalism, owning and publishing the Dawson Sentinel for 16 years. A member of the Military Affairs Committee, he surveys the actors in the drama, occasionally giving sonorous utterance to carefully chosen words. Not a jumping jack politician, he votes with stolid, silent conviction that the G. O. P. elephant is not dead, but only playing 'possum.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Change in Masters Makes No Change in Work

By Robert Quillen

In a certain land far away, a combination of folly and greed caused a period of hard times and the people began to clamor for a new form of government.

It was a marshy land, requiring much ditching, and the ditch-diggers were trained from childhood to handle a spade.

They were strong men, with large corns on their hands, and while they envied the easy life of the rich, they despised the elegant softies who could not swing a pick.

One day a white-faced man with long hair and a gift of gab came among them and said: "What fools you are to sweat under the sun and bend your weary backs at menial toil while other men wear white collars and ride in fine cars. Why do you endure these hard times in stupid silence? Demand your rights. Pull down your fat masters and claim your share of the earth's riches. Follow me and become free men."

So the ditch-diggers joined the revolution and the government was overthrown and the long-haired orator formed a new organization to run things.

The burden of responsibility was heavy on his shoulders and he lay awake at night trying to pick out the right men to do the nation's work.

The ditch-diggers quit their jobs and dressed in their Sunday clothes and met in a park to celebrate their new freedom. Some dreamed of loot and many dreamed of power, but all alike saw visions of wealth and luxury. How grand it would be to wear a silk hat and smoke six-bit cigars.

While they listened to their orators praising the new regime, the long-haired orator appeared in a swell limousine, followed by soldiers in armored cars.

"Hail, liberator!" cried the ditch-diggers. "We are ready for our reward. What shall we do now?"

The long-haired one glared at them.

"Why, you infernal half-wits," he roared, "the ditches are filling up. Get busy with your spades." Then he turned to an officer and said: "Shoot the first one you catch loafing."

Who Will Take Their Places?

Twenty-five years ago, that is to say in the year 1909, Great Britain and Ireland had the most remarkable group of original dramatists since 1609 — Bernard Shaw, James Barrie, John Galsworthy, Granville-Barker, John M. Synge, W. B. Yeats, Arthur Pinero, Henry Arthur Jones, Arnold Bennett, and others. Today Galsworthy, Synge, Jones and Bennett are dead; and the others have either stopped writing plays, or their most important original productions seem to be in the past.

Where are the dramatists to take the places of these men? I see none. Noel Coward is brilliant and versatile, and amazingly prolific; but while his work for the stage is enormously popular and he has scored repeated box-office successes of the first magnitude, the history of British drama would be exactly the same if he had never written at all. Sherriff has written one deeply moving play, "Journey's End;" Drinkwater one very fine play, "Abraham Lincoln;" St. John Ervine a number of years ago wrote two magnificent plays, "John Ferguson" and "Jane Clegg," and he has written other successful productions.

But where are the young men who seem capable of equaling Barrie, Shaw, and Galsworthy?

Twenty-five years ago among the British novelists were Joseph Conrad, John Galsworthy, H. G. Wells, Arnold Bennett, Thomas Hardy, George Meredith, Rudyard Kipling, George Moore, Eden Phillpotts, William De Morgan, Alfred Ollivant, Archibald Marshall; of these, Hardy, Conrad, Moore, Bennett, Galsworthy, Meredith, De Morgan, Ollivant are dead, and most of the others are advanced in years. Of the younger men who have come to the front, Hugh Walpole has done the best work. There are a number of excellent women novelists, Sheila Kaye-Smith, for example.

But where are the young writers who show any promise of equaling Hardy, Conrad, Galsworthy, Moore, Meredith, &c?

In poetry, the situation is better; as the late Paul Cohen-Portheim remarked, "in English poetry it is alway summer." Hardy published first-rate poems till his death in 1928; Kipling, Housman, Yeats, and Watson are active; Noyes, Hodgson, De La Mare, Masefield, A. E., Padriac Colum, W. H. Davies, W. W. Gibson, J. Stephens, are all steadily productive.

Tablet's Base Given School

Daniel Boone Trail Marker at Western High is Complete.

A base for its Daniel Boone Memorial Tablet, which it acquired several years ago, yesterday was presented to Western High School by the History Club.

The tablet and its new base now stand in the southeast portion of the school yard. Presentation was made in the auditorium before classes began yesterday.

Originally the Daniel Boone tablet was presented to the institution in behalf of the Daniel Boone Society by the late Ezra Meeker. Western High School is nearer the original Daniel Boone trail than any other educational institution in the Capital.

Official presentation was made by Miss Peggy Dow, chairman of the historical marker committee, and the speech of acceptance was made by Dr. Elmer S. Wilson, principal of the school. Names of the officers of the club are inscribed on the base. These include William Briggs, president; Geraldine Massey, vice president; Mildred Hull, secretary, and Virginia Mills, treasurer.

Speakers at yesterday's exercises were Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, U. S. A., retired; Albert Clyde-Burton, assistant director of the Capital Parks Commission, and Mrs. Eudora Hazen Husong, a lineal descendant of Daniel Boone.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE BEACH COSTUME OUTLOOK.

Bathing suits will be so scant this summer that the girls will look almost as scandalous as they do in the advertisements.

* * * *

The beach censors are out with their rulings on "What the Well-Undressed Woman Will Wear," but they will be terribly disappointed if she wears it.

* * * *

You can make bathing suits for a mother and three daughters out of one bandanna handkerchief and a midget's mittens.

* * * *

The modern bathing girl is just a nudist with inhibitions against a full membership.

* * * *

None of Earl Carroll's showgirls ever wore less. And if you could see the famous Carroll bathtub episode revived it would look mid-Victorian.

* * * *

The country has gone sun-crazy and nothing means social ostracism to a young woman more than a white skin.

* * * *

If a girl's skin is what used to be known as flesh color her friends decide she has low blood pressure or spends all her time reading in dark corners of public libraries. Or both.

* * * *

An old-fashioned girl in America these days is a girl who wants only part of her body tanned and whose spine is still a secret to some of the natives.

* * * *

Whatever the modern bathing costume has done it has made the sunburn lotion industry one of the Nation's greatest summer businesses. The only difference is that while the old-fashioned girl wanted to prevent sunburn, the modern girl wants to make it indelible and nonfading.

* * * *

But as unrefined as the bathing girls may be, the modern male bather is worse. The girls, after all, look attractive, but when some of those business men bathers take to shedding everything, but a pair of wrestler's panties they become a public scandal and a national menace.

* * * *

No man with so many layers of fat across his torso that he looks like a balloon tire poster should consider himself ornamental with his shirt and jersey off.

* * * *

But the fatter they are the more fixed is the notion that they are sea-going Apollos.

* * * *

There oughta be a law. And it ought to be framed by the meat packers.

REACTION.

I like a girl who doesn't mutter,
About not eating bread or butter;
I'd marry, if I had the choosing,
The first one who was not reducing.

SIGHTSEEING.

Elmer Twitchell says that during the fleet's visit to New York he saw a sailor riding up and down Riverside Drive on a bus and giving as his excuse the fact that he had always wanted to see what the fleet looked like himself.

The fleet was so late arriving in New York the other day that for hours there was a fear it had gone Republican.

It was held helpless off the city by a fog. Just as the Administration was about to send for Prof. Tugwell, however, the fog lifted without him.

J. P. Morgan & Co., it is reported, will operate as a commercial bank and discontinue its security business. This, if true, will constitute the major surgical operation of the century.

Add embarrassing moments: The Geneva Disarmament Conference hearing a radio broadcast of the fleet review by President Roosevelt while an American delegate is speaking.

Intoxicated Motorist Fined $100, Jailed

Westminster, Md., June 4 (Spl.).—Howard L. Mathias, of Baltimore, arrested Friday by State Officer B. C. Mason and charged with reckless driving, operating a car while intoxicated and failing to stop after an accident, pleaded guilty before Police Magistrate George E. Benson and was fined $100 for driving while intoxicated and 30 days in jail, in addition to a fine of $10 for reckless driving.

The third charge was dismissed.

War Principles Of Socialists Due for Vote

Proposal Seeks Support for Dictatorship of Workers.

Detroit, June 4 (AP).—Membership of the Socialist party will be polled in a referendum on the declaration of principles which committed the Socialists to resisting war by all available means and urged them not to shirk a workers' dictatorship in the event of capitalist collapse.

The 25 per cent of the delegates needed to call for a poll was easily obtainable after the bitter closing session yesterday. The right wing "Old Guard" opposition to abandonment of the traditional policy of the party was routed by the leftist elements.

The referendum will be sent members in two weeks.

"We want to play the game fair," declared Norman Thomas, one of those who exhorted the delegations to the more revolutionary viewpoint.

The new National executive committee of the party, whose viewpoint is one of radically more aggressive leadership in organizing laborers and farmers, met today to inaugurate the new left era of the party.

One of the first actions of the committee was to ask for an investigation of the party status of F. H. Shoemaker, of Minnesota.

Informed by Minnesota members that Shoemaker was still a member of the party, the National executive committee expressed the belief the State organization should expel Shoemaker.

The Representative was censured severely by Thomas and other committee members for what they termed "erratic" viewpoints and a complete disavowal of Socialist principles.

This brought the decision of the National executive committee that henceforth any Socialist who seeks office in the Farmer-Labor party must first have the sanction of the party.

The committeemen made it plain, however, that its objections were not to Farmer-Labor parties. It was understood that the viewpoint of the committee in the future would be more favorable to closer relations with such movements.

Hays Has His Say as to Place Pictures Occupy

Czar of Films Addresses an Alumni Public

Offers Defense Against an Uninformed Laity; Theater News.

Reproduced From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Much has been written here these past few days concerning the subterranean crusade being waged by the "Legion of Decency" and allied organizations for the uplift of the screen.

It has been pointed out that all of the hue and cry anent the decadence—if that is what it is, and I don't believe it—of the cinema is in the nature of a bludgeon placed gratuitously in the hands of Will H. Hays, so-called "czar of the movies," to enable him, unassisted by volunteer groups, to put into full force and effect the precepts that he has always held for the furtherance of the form of entertainment with which he has been content to cast his lot.

Now it seems no more than the simple course of justice to permit Mr. Hays to say something on his own behalf. Or perhaps it were better said, on behalf of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which he is president.

The occasion of his dissertation—and Will Hays needs no particular occasion to touch off a dissertation on any topic he may favor at the moment—was a reunion of alumni of Wabash College, a good old Hoosier institution that has turned out many celebrities.

Mass entertainment, Mr. Hays pointed out, had its rise with the motion picture, which democratized all the other arts and brought to the poorest hamlet in the land the work of great artists, writers, directors and musicians of our time.

In a Quarter-Century.

"Only in the past 25 years," he said, "has the American family formed the habit of getting regular recreation in the theater. And it is practically only yesterday that the best theatrical diversion became possible and comfortable for the masses."

A new vista is being unfolded for motion pictures and other forms of mass entertainment, Mr. Hays declared, by the era of greater leisure, which social and economic development promises to bring.

"It is a new era," he pointed out, "because its significance is not concerned with what we used to call the 'leisure class.' Fewer hours in a shorter working week mean the enfranchising of millions of office and factory workers in a greater leisure party."

The vast public interest in motion pictures and the constructive criticism of picture entertainment that flow in from a million sources, Mr. Hayes predicted, are the forces that would carry the screen to higher and higher standards of social achievement.

"Criticism, good, bad and indifferent," he said, "is evidence of the important position of the screen as an art. The final product of our studios is established by the audience, as well as by authors, writers, directors, artists and technicians."

The motion picture industry, Mr. Hays said, welcomes public criticism. "Without this criticism," he continued, "progress would be impossible in this as in any other service of popular entertainment.

From Peep-Show Days.

"Ever since the motion picture emerged from the peep-show, the screen has been the subject of constant controversy. Naturally. The motion picture business is everybody's business. Every one of 123,000,000 people in the United States—man, woman and child—has and is entitled to have his own opinion of the movies. It is expressed at the box office. It is expressed by the daily published opinion of more than 600 motion picture critics in the newspapers of the United States. It is expressed from the pulpit and from the public platform.

"It is expressed by thousands of honest people whose only purpose is to advance the art and to further the entertainment interests of the American family."

There is, of course, much more of this, pointing out in what manner the motion picture as an institution has maintained its reputation. This will be skipped over briefly, except for the fact that Will H. Hays is the greatest asset the pictures can boast.

Ask any member of his MPPDOAI, leaving out the "ands," and you will be told the same thing!

There are certain events that stand out in the reportorial mind. Especially the theatrical reportorial mind—if any.

One of them this last season was the preview of "Dinner at Eight," an event that was made notable by a dinner at 8 in the spacious salons of the Hotel Shoreham under the genial auspices of City Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc.; another was the formal inauguration of the Continental room out at Wardman Park under the personal auspices of Mr. George V. Riley, one of the most perfect hosts the District has known.

Now, as the third of this triumvirate of perfectly appointed parties, comes the invitational dedication of the Powhatan roof, last Thursday night, under the individual direction of Arthur J. Harnett, managing director of the establishment that bears so historical and honorable a name and reputation.

Mr. Harnett's party was one of the most distinguished efforts in its line that the current season has noted. There was almost a plethora of starch in attendance, the season of the year being what it is, the newspaper fraternity, alone, accounting for the working clothes that were in a modest ascendant.

There were, too, the Shoreham terrace and Arlington roof openings over the week-end, of which more at a later date.

Gayety

"CHILDREN OF THE SUN." Public Welfare Pictures Corporation release of "La Marche au Soleil," with narration by Edward A. Gallner. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

As the second offering in its summer program of pictures, the Gayety presents a survey of European nudist camps, a version of "La Marche au Soleil" (The March to the Sun), embellished with an English dissertation on the advantages of sunlight.

With English remarks on French and German subjects, "Children of the Sun" is a glorification of open-air calesthenics and a discourse on health and body building under conditions where clothes (for screen purposes) are reduced to the irreducible minimum.

It is not a sex picture, but a diverting presentation of an educational point that is frequently neglected—the need of sunshine and exercise.

On the stage the inappropriately titled "Nudity in Gold," offers a group of five girls disporting themselves after the fashion of the picture.

Wayland Villiers stays over from last week and comments on nudism, pointing out its obvious advantages and some of the disadvantages that might obtain from an unrestricted and extreme application of its principles.

Bethany President Quits.

Bethany, W. Va., June 4 (Spl.).—Dr. Joseph A. Serena has resigned as president of Bethany College, effective at the close of the present academic year, and the board of trustees announced its acceptance.

Just Having Himself a Time!

No wonder W. C. Fields, that eminent comedian and pantomimist, complains that Baby LeRoy steals all his scenes! Thievery, with the aid of such tactics as this, should not be difficult, even for one of Master LeRoy's tender years. After all, a hammer is a hammer! The scene, incidentally, is from Mr. Fields' latest starring vehicle, "The Old-Fashioned Way," a Paramount picture, which will be coming along to the local screen in due course.

The Richard Arlens Return, Cured of Yen for Europe; Maureen O'Sullivan "Discovered" Three Times; Chatter Along the Boulevard.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, June 3.—Richard Arlen and Jobyna Ralston, his wife, just back from Europe, say that hereafter they are going to do their touring in California.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN.

"Europe is run like a carnival," said Dick, "and you get tired of it after a few days. I thought there were going to be plenty of Americans in Paris, but a friend of mine there who is a newspaper correspondent, told me that the Yank population had fallen from 125,000 to less than 14,000.

"Train and airplane services abroad are terrible. We tried to get a plane from Rome to Tunis, Africa, and waited four days for information. Then a hotel official told us no one knew anything about the flying service to Africa. We didn't go.

"We had a dozen disputes with taxi drivers in Paris, who figured to charge us double what the meter read.

"Mrs. Arlen and I attended the horse races at Longchamps and made several bets. In three cases our horses came in first, but we were never paid off."

Triple Discovery.

Maureen O'Sulivan relates that she has been "discovered" three times.

"First, Frank Borzage discovered me—and then Fatty Arbuckle discovered me—met me at a party and thought I might be good in a comedy," he said," Maureen explained.

"Then a Paramount scout discovered me walking along Hollywood boulevard. During the last two discoveries I had been in pictures right along. All of which makes me think I'm not so good!"

"Imagine My Embarrassment!"

Randolph Scott admits he is absent-minded. And he proved it the other night. After Randy had gone to bed he heard a radio playing. Thinking it was in the next apartment, he arose after an hour of tossing, to go and remonstrate with the owner. In the hallway he met an irate neighbor.

"What do you mean, running your radio at this hour of the night?" demanded the irate one. The music was coming from Randy's own machine. He had forgotten to turn it off!

"WHERE SINNERS MEET." RKO-Radio picturization of the play, "The Dover Road," by A. A. Milne, co-starring Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, with Reginald Owen, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray and Gilbert Emery. Directed by J. Walter Ruben. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

With the stars of "Cavalcade" reunited and an excellent supporting company, A. A. Milne's "The Dover Road" comes to the screen as "Where Sinners Meet," the season's most flagrant example of gross mistitling and extremely bad taste.

True, such a title might apply to some sources of cinema material, but certainly it does not apply to "The Dover Road," to Author Milne or to the present work upon the screen. Here is, then, a Milne work just as Milne addicts should like it; a typically wordy English drawing room comedy-drama specializing in lines and situations rather than fast-moving action.

As such, "The Dover Road" in its cinematized form will probably not be overly successful, for its appeal is largely to those who prefer the legitimate theater. The play—its style and method of treatment—is strictly of the speaking stage and one where these characteristics must be maintained in order to be filmed at all.

Basis of Plot.

As is probably well known, the action revolves around the efforts of the Socratic Mr. Lattimer to determine the reasons for clandestine romances. To that end he contrives to have sundry couples spend a week with him as his guests, to leave later wiser if not actully glad that the infatuation of the moment did not go further.

What happens when a husband and wife find themselves under the same roof with their "seconds" is better left to Mr. Milne and to the picture. There is in the working out of the difficulties plenty of humor and good sound sense.

As master of the house on the Dover road, Clive Brook assumes a role somewhat different from his wont. His is that of an observer of the foibles of his fellow man—not without his own idea of whom Diana Wynyard should marry—rather than the great sufferer of most of his earlier works. And Miss Wynyard, exponent of grace and charm, is at her best.

Support and Supplementaries.

Alan Mowbray and Reginald Owen are the gentlemen in the case, with Billie Burke as the other woman. Gilbert Emery makes a grand butler. While leaning backward at times to effect the very "what ho" atmosphere, these supporting members of the cast have been admirably chosen and their several delineations blend in excellently with the spirits of the play.

"A Torch Tango" leads the auxiliary attractions, with Ruth Etting adding "Don't Blame Me" and "A Kiss at Midnight" to her theme song. "Sultan Pepper" is a mildly amusing cartoon of the Little King series. The latest installment of the Pathe News rounds out the program.

Glen Echo Park.

The ideal weather over the week-end impelled a more than usual quota of merrymakers to Glen Echo Park, where the usual "good time was had by all."

The airplane swings, the thrilling coaster dips and everything else that moved on land or in the sky was patronized to the limit. Crystal pool, especially, was the magnet for people of all ages with the June sunshine just right for water sports.

Saturday evening a fine crowd of dancers were on hand in the Spanish Garden ballroom, frolicking to the tunes of the MacWilliams Orchestra, led by that ace of directors, Phil O'Brien.

Ax Murderer Of Two Blames "Little Things"

Youth Asserts 'Something' Drove Him to Slay His Mother, Brother.

Los Angeles, June 4 (AP).—Seeking a more satisfactory explanation for the crime confessed by Louis Rude Payne, 21, police today sought a woman 10 years his senior in an effort to learn more about the youth who admittedly hacked his mother and brother to death and then wandered about for four days while their mutilated bodies lay undiscovered in the home.

"Because of a series of little things" was the nearest young Payne, son of a St. Louis public utility executive, got to the motive in the confession made public by police and alienists of the ax slaying Wednesday morning of the mother, Mrs. Carrie L. Payne, 45, and the brother, Robert, 14.

Police Detective Capt. H. J. Wallis, said young Payne told officers he had been keeping company with Marcella Weaver, a waitress, who was described as 10 years older than he. Officers said they had not interviewed her as yet, however.

Surrenders, Confesses.

Shortly after he had read in a newspaper at Huntington Beach yesterday that police were searching for him, Payne, a former law student, surrendered and was returned to Los Angeles. Police here said he quickly admitted he killed his mother and brother with a small hand ax early last Wednesday morning and garroted them with a piece of heavy string.

A letter addressed to his father at a St. Louis hotel, found in his clothing, was identified by the youth as in his handwriting. A telegram, also unsent, read:

"Dear Dad: I have killed mother and Bob. I am going to tell the police."

"I have really done all this in a daze," Payne told Wallis today. "I knew what I was doing but it was like I couldn't help myself; like something stronger than me was urging me on to it. You know, like there really were two parties to it, but physically only one."

No "Big Quarrel."

"Have you had any quarrel with your mother or brother?" Capt. Wallis asked.

"Not any big one; nothing that would be sufficient to cause me to do anything radical. It may be that I was just unconsciously filled up with minor disturbances."

Payne said he killed his mother first, then went to his brother's room and hit him several times on the head. When the younger boy raised his arm, two fingers were severed by the blow from the ax.

"They were both asleep," Payne said. "I had gone to bed, but was restless. It was after midnight when I got out of bed. Bob had been using the ax in making toy boats. I went into their rooms several times before I hit them. I looked at them. I was fighting with myself, trying to keep down the impulse to kill."

Asked if he knew of anything that might have happened to him that would cause him to kill, the youth said an automobile accident two years ago had made him "miserable."

Killed Elderly Woman.

"I have been miserable ever since that manslaughter charge was filed against me in St. Louis," he said. "I drove an auto that killed an elderly woman. I thought I'd go up for life imprisonment, for awhile. But my father settled a large sum of money on the woman's relatives and the courts lowered the charges to negligent operation of a motor vehicle. But I couldn't forget that I killed someone.

"But I never dreamed I'd do anything like this. Mother had always been so good to me. She never reproached me for what happened in St. Louis."

Holding the fingers of his right hand tightly against his forehead, Louis smiled wryly as he rambled on incoherently on various phases of his life. At times he sobbed.

"Have you been particularly friendly with your mother lately?" he was asked.

"Always Pals."

"We have all four of us been always what you might term pals. That's why I can not understand why I did this."

Payne said he had only a hazy recollection of time since the slayings. He said he stayed at the home for a while, prepared some food and later took all the money he could find, registered at a hotel, saw a show and walked for a long time. When he saw the picture of his mother in a newspaper and learned police were searching for him he decided to surrender.

Officers said when Louis was brought to headquarters he had a police whistle, an officer's white metal badge and a small-caliber revolver. The badge and the whistle were carried, the youth said, "because of a foolish whim." He said he had not contemplated suicide at any time and that he was "not afraid of the legal consequences of this."

"The largest amount of punishment I have had was my own conscience," he said.

The youth was still talking and gesticulating as he was led back into his cell.

Kenneth Williams, psychoanalytist, who examined Ruth Snyder, Judd Gray, Winnie Ruth Judd and other murderers, visited Payne in his jail cell later today and after talking at length with him said the youth had been suffering from melancholia.

Woman Recalls Name After 2-Week Coma

Houston, Tex., June 4 (AP).—A young woman hospital patient, believed to be suffering from amnesia, remembered today that she is Mrs. Paula Rockwell, traveling representative of a Kansas City cosmetic company.

She was taken to Jefferson Davis Hospital May 27 after she had appealed to police to aid in establishing her identity.

20,549 Added To U. S. Rolls

Total for Nation 644,108, Highest Since 1921; D. C. Has 83,850.

There were 20,549 workers added to the Government pay roll in April, according to an announcement released yesterday, bringing the total to 644,108. This is the highest figure reached since July 31, 1921, when the war machine was still on pay rolls.

In the District of Columbia 3,837 names were added to permanent and temporary lists, making a total of 83,850. Outside the District 28,410 were added to the March enrollment for a total of 560,258.

These figures do not include the legislative, judicial or military branches of the Government, nor the employes of the District.

In the District, the greatest net gain was registered by the Navy Department, which had 345 more permanent civilian workers than in March. The National Recovery Administration was second with 297, and the Home Owners Loan Corporation showed a net gain of 206.

An addition of nearly 2,000 to the list of permanent workers of the Tennessee Valley Authority led the agencies outside the District. The Postoffice Department continued reducing personnel by eliminating 832 names from its lists. Other net gains registered were: Department of Agriculture, 754; Navy Department, 694; Veterans Administration, 565; Home Owners Loan, 1,095.

Army to Enact Coast Defense

Elaborate Maneuvers Set This Summer Along Atlantic.

The most elaborate war maneuvers ever undertaken by the Army will be staged on the East Coast late this summer, it was learned yesterday at the War Department.

The tactical problem involved concerns the defense of the American coast line. A large number of local officers will participate in the theoretical invasion. In the interest of economy, however, it is planned to use practically no infantry soldiers, the officers merely carrying out the actual troop maneuvers on paper.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, will be in command of a theoretical force of about 700,000 men. This will constitute two field armies, the problem providing the first test of the present War Department plan of organization. Actually, however, about 500 men in all will go into the field.

The entire maneuver will last about a week. It is understood that Gen. MacArthur's headquarters will be set up in the vicinity of New Brunswick, N. J.

Auto Insurance Bill Reported

All Drivers in Accidents Affected by Senate Measure.

Automobile drivers in accidents will be required to take out accident insurance under a bill reported favorably to the Senate yesterday by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

The bill faces a doubtful future because it includes taxicab drivers. The Senate recently passed a bill requiring financial responsibility insurance for taxi drivers, but it was killed in the House.

The committee amended the bill in an effort to meet objections. J. Dalton, head of the Blue Light Taxicab Co., at a recent committee hearing said the pending bill was vicious because it would take from taxi drivers their operating permits if cab owners failed to pay damages which might be awarded against them.

Discretion is given to the District Commissioners to return drivers' permits under the committee amendment. All drivers, however, would be required to take out insurance in approved companies after they had an accident. The insurance required is $5,000 for injury to one person, $10,000 for injury to two persons and $1,000 for property damage.

2 Welfare Selections Go to City Heads Today

Names of two prominent District residents will be submitted to the District Commissioners today by Elwood Street, director of public welfare, for nomination to the Board of Public Welfare, it was learned last night.

Mr. Street would not divulge the names of the persons. They will take the vacancies left by the resignations of W. W. Millan and Sidney F. Taliaferro.

Radio Waves and Ripples

ACCUSING fingers enjoining one to "Join the Navy" have pointed at Ted Church for years from those jaunty-colored posters glorifying life on the salty wave. But Ted's keen intuition told him that gobs have other little matters to attend to. Scrubbing the decks . . . f'instance.

So WJSV's laconic exec, who recently covered himself with glory and much tropical tan during C. B. S.'s airing of the fleet review broadcast, boarded the aircraft carrier Lexington with respect. But Ted's radio sang froid banished all rank distinctions and before he knew it he was rubbing shoulders with admirals.

• • • •

THE jaded senses of radio listeners, ever half-hopeful but usually resigned to routine mediocrity, should quicken with delight and surely not pass by what N. B. C. will air tonight when the American premiere performance of "The Red Poppy," current Muscovite ballet sensation, is sent over the networks at 9 p. m.

Owing to its lengthy score the ballet, conducted with hand-copied orchestral parts forwarded here by Soviet authorities, will be presented in two separate broadcasts, the first being tonight and the remainder Tuesday, June 12.

Ambassador Troyanovsky will speak from N. B. C.'s local studios during the latter part of the presentation on June 12. The occasion being rather mete for such things, His Excellency will sandwich remarks concerning Soviet culture in between pauses occasioned by the rattling of scores and the scraping of fiddle bows.

Just in case he doesn't get around to it, we believe it will add to your enjoyment of "The Red Poppy" if you are warned, for example, that the music is sprightly, tuneful and Irving Berlinish . . . that all Russia, from proletarian vodka parlors to solemn councils of commissars, is humming airs from the popular symphonic piece.

The work of Reinhold Gliere, a modern Russian composer, this truly Soviet gesture to esthetic capitalistic musical circles is built around the familiar "Mme. Butterfly-Mme. Chrysanthemum" motif . . . but with a vigorous Soviet twist suggesting all that is bizarre, rich and sensitive in our newly moved in neighbors.

To be exact and therefore excusably vague the plot of "The Red Poppy" has no gleaming battleships or bamboo tea retreats. It concerns a Chinese girl's love for the captain of a Russian ship, and her death at the hand of a jealous suitor. We believe that your musical appetite and possibly your much-jarred esthetic senses will leap forward with a new lease after hearing this one.

Whitecaps.

WMAL — Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, speaking during commencement exercises of the university, 1:30 p. m.; Dr. George F. Zook, United States Commissioner of Education, speaking on "The Schools in Local Revival." C. R. Mann, director of American Council on Education, also speaking, 6:15 p. m.; American premiere of Russian ballet, "The Red Poppy," 9 p. m.

WJSV—The Washington Post presents Ruth Anne Davis in comments of feminine interest, 11:45 a. m.; Arno B. CONVICTS may bask in their sun-filled cells at Lorton and babies howl at Gallinger Hospital, but the Board of Public Welfare, like "time," marches on.

Elwood Street is the new bandmaster of the outfit that promises new regimentation of society's delinquents. Late of the Community Chest, Street has much ahead of him. He is not a newcomer to the mike . . . so he decided that the best way of knitting his subordinates together was via radio.

Street will present his message to the department's employes on Thursday from the Department of Commerce auditorium at 9:15 p. m. over WJSV. With a large turnout expected that will include almost every employe save guards at Lorton and nurses tending infants, the department promises a field day. The broadcast will last until 10 p. m.

Mary A. Hill, supervisor of the emergency relief division, will be another speaker. There will be others, but Street won't tell who.

First Lady Reigns Over Benefit Ball

New York Function Aids Groups Assisting Jobless Girls.

Officers of Navy Escort Mrs. Roosevelt and Present Drill.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The President will be joined today by Mrs. Roosevelt, who has been in New York, where last evening she attended the June ball held in the grand suite of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel for the benefit of the clubs sponsored by the First Lady for unemployed girls in New York.

The ball was a brilliant affair, attended by thousands of members of New York society, and the presence of Mrs. Roosevelt, as well as that of Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; the Governor of New York and Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, Mayor and Mrs. Fiorello LaGuardia and others, lent an official atmosphere to the event.

Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of honor at the large dinner given by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst preceding the ball, at her home on Riverside Drive. There were more than 40 guests.

Navy Officers' Escort.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her guests arrived at the ball shortly after 10 o'clock and were escorted to the official box by a guard of honor, consisting of 100 officers of the Navy in full dress uniform.

Immediately following the entrance of the First Lady, the officers presented the impressive guard mount ceremony while the massed Navy bands played the National anthem to mark the formal opening of the ball.

The extensive program, planned by Miss Elsa Maxwell, also included concerts by the Navy bands and the premiere showing of the motion picture, "Du Barry." Miss Gladys Swarthout and Nino Martini of the Metropolitan Opera gave operatic selections.

Five Thousand Attend.

Other noted entertainers, including Fanny Brice, Everett Marshall, Willie and Eugene Howard and Ethel Waters, contributed entertainment.

Famous radio singers appeared and a military ballet furnished the finale.

In the assembly were more than 5,000 guests, including officers of the United States fleet, who were honored guests. The long list of patrons and patronesses included men and women of prominence in the political, diplomatic and social life of New York.

Alice Nourse Becomes Bride Of Dr. Caples

Worthington Valley Home of Bride's Parents Wedding Scene.

Yesterday morning a charming garden wedding took place when Miss Alice Curry Nourse, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Upton Darby Nourse, of Dawsonville, Md., became the bride of Dr. Delmas Caples, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. T. Caples, of Worthington Valley. The ceremony was performed in the lovely, old-fashioned garden of the Nourses, at 11 o'clock, in the presence of members of the immediate families and a few intimate friends, by the Rev. J. W. Lowden.

The bride was escorted by her father down the flagged walk to the rose arch where the ceremony took place. She wore a gown of white mousseline de soie, made on princess lines and a large, white picture hat and gloves of white mousseline de soie, and carried a bouquet of white roses and violets.

Sister Matron of Honor.

Mrs. Raleigh Chinn, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. She was costumed in shell-pink mousseline de soie, with a large picture hat and gauntlets of the same shade, and carried an old-fashioned nosegay.

Little Miss Alice Chinn, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She had on a dainty frock of pale pink crepe with a large bow of blue and carried a basket of pink roses tied with blue ribbon.

Dr. Paul Coates, of Baltimore and New York, was best man.

Wedding Breakfast.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast. The drawing room suite was decorated with cut garden flowers in pastel shades. Mrs. Nourse wore a becoming gown of white and lavender figured chiffon and had a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Caples, mother of the bridegroom, had on a smart gown of black chiffon, and carried a cluster of gardenias.

Later Dr. and Mrs. Caples left by motor for a trip through the South. Upon their return they will make their home for a short time at Gaithersburg.

The bride was graduated from the University of Maryland and is a graduate dietitian of Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Caples also was graduated from the University of Maryland and from the University of Maryland Medical School in Baltimore.

Civic Concert Slated Tonight

Miss Louise Tobey to Sing at Premiere of New Orchestra.

The premiere of Washington's Civic Symphony Orchestra this evening at Central High School Auditorium is attracting unusual interest among music lovers of the Capital City not only because of the orchestra itself but because Miss Louise Tobey, daughter of Representative Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire, will make her debut as a concert singer before a Washington audience, appearing as guest soloist with the orchestra. Mr. Bailey F. Hart is the orchestra conductor.

Among those who are expected to be present tonight are the members of the board of advisors of the new orchestra, including Dean and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Edwin B. Five Women Doctors Will Graduate From George Washington University

MISS GRACE V. YOUNG.

MISS CAROLYN SNYDER.

MISS NAOMI KANOF.

MISS FLORENCE BROOKHART

Nine Freshman M. D.'s Enrolled

Changing Attitude Toward Medical Women Shown at University.

Dr. Clara Bliss Finley First Woman to Get "Medic" Degree Here.

FORTY-SEVEN years ago when the first woman was graduated from the George Washington School of Medicine, a woman doctor was considered an anomaly. Even within recent years women have been hesitant about entering the medical profession.

But a growing change in attitude is reflected in this year's graduating class. Out of the 72 students graduating from the school of medicine, five are women. Last year's medical class contained four women. And last fall the freshman class in the school of medicine enrolled nine women, the largest number in the school's history.

The five young women who will receive their medical diplomas at the university's 113th annual commencement Wednesday are Miss Florence H. Brookhart, daughter of former Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa; Miss Naomi Kanof, of New York; Miss Carolyn Hannah Snyder, 2419 First street northwest, Washington; Miss Margaret Catherine Weller, 2929 Cathedral avenue, Washington; and Miss Grace V. Young, 3806 Thirteenth street northwest, Washington.

Women have been admitted to the George Washington University School of Medicine since 1880. The first woman to be graduated was Dr. Clara Bliss Finley who received the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1887. A retired physician and the author of several books, Dr. Finley now lives at Rockville, Va.

Between 1887 and the turn of the century, 19 women were graduated from the school of medicine. The school was established in 1825 and was the eleventh in the United States in the order of founding.

1934 Youth Is Analyzed By The Post

A NEW flood of youth is unloosed this week on the work-a-day world. From the colleges and universities come thousands of young men and women ready to take their places alongside their elders in working, voting—running the country.

What are these young strangers like? Of what are they thinking, talking, dreaming? What attitudes and beliefs will they bring with them into the chaotic economic world they are entering?

A series of articles by Hope Ridings Miller attempting to answer some of these questions will begin tomorrow on the woman's page of The Post. Mrs. Miller has interviewed leaders in the senior classes in the colleges and universities of Washington. She talked with both teachers and pupils in an attempt to obtain a broad and realistic view of what youth of today thinks and believes.

Youth movements throughout the Nation indicate that youth is more serious than it has been for more than a decade. The young college leaders of today have definite ideas on what is wrong with the world and what should be done about it.

These young men and women may be the world leaders of tomorrow. Even though their ideas should change before that time, what they think now is worth listening to. It may be illuminating to parents and to older leaders.

Miss Miller's articles will deal with what college youth is thinking about economics and politics, about education, about society, about religion, and about art and literature. Read on the woman's page of The Post tomorrow the first article in the series—what youthful leaders think about economic systems and government.

Women Riders Don't Rein 'Till Above Clouds

Sky-Riders Hit Mountain Trails in Increasing Numbers.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen

SKY-RIDING—it's a good name for the horseback riding that finds its way along mountain trails above the clouds.

Women are taking to it in earnest, more every summer. Groups from girls' camps, parties of older women, are combining their sport with a good view.

No Dude Ranchers.

The days when Eastern women descended upon the dude ranches, like a cloud of talkative locusts, are left behind. Fewer women collect highly improbable costumes for "roughing it," and go West to watch what is left of the cowboys reduce riding to a comedy.

Instead, they pack some sensible clothes and go off to the nearest mountains to do their own riding. And discover a good time, instead of some second-hand thrills.

The increase in riding for riding's sake among younger women is partly due to the growing amount of time spent on horse back in colleges and summer camps.

Take Horse Along.

Besides regular instruction, exhibitions and gymkhanas college girls are forming clubs and going off on all day horseback trips. After sampling a ride across open country, it's an easy swing over to taking a camping trip in the summer, and taking a horse along for company.

Long rides in the woods and hills are part of the program of most girls' camps. And it's only a short distance from a ride in the foothills of sky-riding.

Woman's Home Instinct Remains Intact After All

New York, June 4 (Spl.).—Neither city life nor higher education have destroyed woman's homing instinct. Only one girl out of 20 in the home economics division of the physiology and hygiene department at Hunter College would prefer to live in an apartment rather than a house.

The 19 who preferred homes said they wanted to plan and build them. As part of the course, each girl was required either to plan a house for herself or to find plans satisfactory. Twelve selected colonial dwellings, three favored English and contemporary and one chose a bungalow.

Girlishness Is Idea in Dress For Graduates

17-Year Olds No Longer Slink Toward Diplomas Garbed in Satin.

THE approving, somewhat sentimental smiles of their elders will greet sweet girl graduates who step forward to receive their diplomas this June.

For a recent survey of Washington schools shows that the flaming youth model student is definitely out, and this year's graduates will appear in gowns so demure and sweet that even the most exacting maiden aunt will applaud.

It is good, the guardians of youth agree, to see girlish beauty properly attired in ruffly white organdie, and picture hats, wearing the traditional expression of dewey innocence once more.

In the not-so-long distant age of prosperity, jazz and youthful rebellion, mothers were often shocked and embarrassed when their 17-year-old daughters, gowned in clinging satin, slinked along the platform in the most sirenish manner possible, and languidly accepted their sheepskins.

A Trousseau Required.

Parental and pedagogical remonstrance were futile in that age. At the mention of white organdie girls taunted their parents with cries of "Victorianism," or used the forceful argument:

"But all the others are going to have satin, and you don't want them to think we can't afford it, do you?"

In those days it took a regular trousseau for a girl to leave high school in proper fashion. Proms, baccalaureate sermons, class days and graduation exercises, each required a new frock and accessories.

But the jazz era died from overexertion, common sense became fashionable as a result of the depression, and continued rebellion was a bit tiresome. And today's graduates are only too glad to limit their wardrobes, and appear dressed up in the once despised cottons.

Graduation at Western High School takes place in the afternoon, and the students wear simple white, semisport frocks. They are requested not to wear flowers, but each girl carries a red rose, the school flower. For the prom the girls can wear whatever they choose, and class night requires no "dressing up."

Double Duty Dress

At Alice Deal Junior High School, whose students graduate from the ninth grade, before entering senior high, the girls appear at commencement in the same dresses they wear to their dancing party. In fact, a girl who refuses to wear the simple frock required for graduation may not go to the party.

At this school the principal holds a meeting with the girls early in the spring when she discusses suitability, materials and colors. At a later meeting with the mothers the final decision is made. The dresses must be inexpensive, informal and girlish. Flowers are not permissible.

Seniors at Holton Arms this year will wear blue mousseline-de-soie to their reception and thesis party. These dresses were selected early in the spring, and are identical. The girls will graduate in the afternoon, and will wear white afternoon dresses with small sleeves. They will carry identical bouquets. The cost of graduation has been lowered at this school by buying less expensive flowers, and having dresses made.

Miss Eleanore Williams Entertains at Luncheon

Miss Eleanore Williams entertained at luncheon Saturday for Mrs. Harry S. Robinson, Miss Nannie Dinwiddie, Mrs. John H. Small, Miss Ethel Bagley and Miss Evelyn Furman.

Miss Williams was hostess Saturday night at a small dinner and bridge party in her home on Connecticut avenue. The guests included Miss Marguerite Kennedy, Miss Maude B. Anderson, of Baltimore; Capt. and Mrs. John R. Holt, Mr. Luxford, Mr. George Riggs and Mr. Elmer Kennedy.

Mrs. Gore Fills the Office Of Chief Reader to Husband

INTERESTING AND STIMULATING to Mrs. Thomas Pryor Gore, above, has been the self-appointed task of reading to her husband from more weighty books than most women have occasion to dip into. Senator from Oklahoma, he lost his sight in an accident in youth.

She Tells How the Senator Studies, How He Travels Alone to Strange Cities, and of the Enjoyment He Gets Out of Social Diversions.

Leaders in official and social life have been brought closer to the women of America through The Washington Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" series. In interviews with the radio reporter, the Capital's "First Ladies" have discussed feminine topics for the benefit of coast-to-coast audiences over a National Broadcasting Co. network twice weekly over WRC and WMAL on Mondays and Fridays.

By Margaret Santry.
The Radio Reporter.

HOW Oklahoma's famous blind Senator views the world through the eyes of his charming wife, provided a highly interesting radio broadcast to those listening to The Washington Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" program over WRC yesterday.

Mrs. Thomas Pryor Gore discussed the unique career, homelife, hobbies and other interests of her distinguished husband and told how he has utilized his remarkable memory to make up the loss of his sight.

In total darkness since early boyhood when an accident at play destroyed his sight, the Senator disdained the use of Braille for study and knowledge, because of the limited number of books to be found in the raised characters for the blind, Mrs. Gore explained.

Instead he has acquired his knowledge through others' eyes in his primary schooling, college and university studies. Since their marriage she has served as reader in the preparation of his legislative studies and research.

That Famous Memory.

When we remarked upon the Senator's feats of memory which have made him famed as a challenging opponent in his mastery of facts and statistics, Mrs. Gore replied:

"Some one has said we use our memories only 25 per cent of our capacity. Mr. Gore has developed his memory to a much greater extent in using it to make up the loss of his sight. He rarely takes notes or memoranda. He doesn't use Braille, although he once took a course in it. He found the scope of knowledge covered in the Braille libraries much too limited for his purpose. His education, and all his acquisition of knowledge has been accomplished by having other people read to him."

Mrs. Gore admitted that in her capacity as reader she has probably read more weighty books than most women have occasion to. It has, however, been stimulating and interesting to her.

Recalling one example of his memory feats during the time he practiced law, Mrs. Gore said:

"I remember one time he dictated a 500-page brief on a very intricate legal matter entirely from memory. His speeches, too, are never written out in advance. He prepares his subject and then speaks extemporaneously, relying on his memory for facts and statistics. It often disappoints me that he doesn't dictate his speeches so I can have a record of them for our children. But he is lazy as all men are, and unless they are taken down when he makes them, I just can't seem to get a copy.

Miss Santry: "Is it true the Senator gets about from one office to another in the Capitol and to the Senate Chamber without anyone attending him?"

He Travels Alone.

Mrs. Gore: "No, he doesn't believe in using his mind to feel and find his way about. He always has someone with him, although he does travel all over the country by himself.

"He does this by relying entirely upon public servants when he travels. He takes a taxi to the station, and on his arrival there calls a red cap to get him to his seat on the train. Curiously enough, however, he does know his way anywhere on a train alone. He can go from his seat to the dining car and even find his berth by himself."

Miss Santry: "And does he get about in strange cities by himself?"

Mrs. Gore: "Yes, in the same way. When he arrives he has a porter put him in a taxi. At his hotel he usually calls a Western Union messenger and hires him by the hour to go with him everywhere. He really has everything figured out beautifully."

Miss Santry: "I understand you have taken an active part in his campaign, Mrs. Gore."

Mrs. Gore: "No, only in a clerical way when my husband has been running for office. I've never gone in for speech making or active campaigning. Some times I have gone on some of his trips, but as a rule he takes a man with him in an automobile and travels three or four hundred miles a day over the State. That's a bit too strenuous for me!"

Mrs. Gore said the Senator has been interested in public affairs since he was 19. At 20 he received the nomination for the legislature in his home State, before he was of legal age to accept it. His uncle served instead."

Political Romance.

Mrs. Gore met her husband at a political meeting when he was 25.

"Down in Texas where my father had a cotton plantation, we made a sort of Roman holiday out of political meetings. There would be a big barbecue, a band, and of course speeches. I met my husband at such a meeting when he was the principal speaker of the day. Four years later we were married."

Concerning the Senator's hobbies, Mrs. Gore said, "Books, books, and more books. I sometimes tell him he belongs to the order of bibliomaniacs! We have an attic in our home 60 feet long and its lined from floor to ceiling with books."

The Senator is fond of going out. He enjoys dinner parties, and loves the theater. Movies interest him, but he rarely goes because he doesn't like the pushing and crowding and scramble for seats. He often used to attend the silent movies with Mrs. Gore. She explained the romances enacted on the silver screen. Stories that hardly matched the real life romance that has marked the happy marriage of the Senator from Oklahoma and his charming wife, through whose eyes he sees the world.

Tune in Friday, WMAL at 2 p. m., for another "First Ladies of the Capital" interview.

Jumbled Advice Given Season's College Grads

Country's Leading Industrialists Offer Contradictory Criticisms.

NEWARK, N. J., June 4 (U.P.).—A bewildering array of criticism and suggestion was offered today by the country's leading industrialists to some 134,000 young men and women graduating from colleges and universities this month.

The suggestions, ranging from a year of farm work for each ablebodied graduate to a period of house-to-house selling to build up self-confidence, were disclosed as a prelude to what will be thrashed out at the first choosing-a-career conference here on June 26.

The Nation-wide survey conducted by George Bijur, conference director, disclosed almost as many opinions as replies. Some employers preferred college men; some did not. Some thought the average graduate "too cocky;" others that he lacked self-confidence.

The compulsory farming suggestion came from August Heckscher, New York philanthropist. Will Hays, "czar" of the motion picture industry which maintains a casting bureau for the selection of "type" actors, favored a similar clearing house for the listing of students according to their capabilities. Edward G. Seubert, oil company executive, recommended that those who can not find jobs should make them by inventing a new idea that will sell.

Lincoln Filene, Boston merchant, shoved the placement burden on the colleges themselves "so the young people won't try to find places in already crowded fields."

Mental employment so as to "get the underdog experience and point of view" was favored by J. S. Douglas, mining company executive.

Nellie Tayle Ross, former Governor of Wyoming and now director of the Mint, advised "scrutinizing interesting fields to find those not overcrowded."

Some other opinions included:

George B. Chandler, Ohio Chamber of Commerce: Use friends for influence in getting a job.

Nicholas M. Schenck, motion picture executive: Students should write articles dealing with industry to call atention to knowledge of the problems at hand.

E. M. Allen, chemical manufacturer: Many employers hesitate to employ graduates of certain colleges because of the "dangerous and radical theories planted in their minds."

A. Wineburgh, manufacturer: Every young man should learn shorthand.

Identical Twins Held Friendly

DURHAM, N. C., June 4 (Spl.).—Following upon the birth of the Dionne quintuplets comes the latest scientific study of identical twins. It is published in Character and Personality, a scientific journal issued at Duke University, and reports on 13 pairs of such twins observed by Helmut Von Bracken of Amsterdam. The children ranged from 6 to 16 years old.

Here are some of the results of the study:

Identical twins spend more time together than fraternals. They do not bore each other. They do not compete nor quarrel with each other. There is a tendency of one member of the pair to be less retiring than the other.

Fraternal twins like to put themselves forward and diminish their partners, while identical twins fall into the opposite extreme in trying to be fair.

Tiny Mirrors on Open-Shank Slippers Seen in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD has come out with some new fashion quirks as regards footwear. Frances Dee recently had spectators agog at the Cocoanut Grove when she appeared in open shank evening slippers. Which, in itself, is not remarkable. But this particular pair were covered with tiny mirrors giving more of a twinkling effect to dancing feet than those all-over rhinestone ones that are seen around now and again.

Foot mittens sound as though they'd be something on the order of bedsocks. But Ginger Rogers' aren't. She wears these sheer silk affairs with hand-crocheted edges with her nudest evening sandals—a perfect mastering of the open-toe situation.

Bathing ensembles aren't new. They've been going on for several seasons now. However, Bette Davis managed to re-work the old idea into something pretty pert and very practical. She wears a silk suit, brief as they come. It's that new thin material which the California sun dries in about two minutes flat.

Has Matching Skirt.

With the suit goes a matching skirt, street length, which the movie star buttons on when it's time to go home. Good for those people who spend much time at the beach and before the end of summer are filled with a tremendous ennui at the thought of constant dressing and undressing.

Even the film stars haven't gone the lengths of procuring this bathing suit or one like it. Perhaps it's too nude for Hollywood, where scantiness is so commonplace. Tight, short trunks have a rounded cut-out over each hip. The halter top is suspended precariously from a chromium neck band. Still on display, as far as we know.

A West Coast fad which doesn't seem to have reached Washington is the middling length beach overall. These things strike the wearer somewhere between the usual length of slacks and shorts. Sort of like plus-fours.

Navy Fashions Popular.

Although the fleet's been in and out, nautical fashions are suffering no let-down. They're intruding into the formal field now. Billie Burke has a white evening dress of linen with a short Eton jacket trimmed with fluted ruffles of navy blue mousseline de soie. When she takes off the jacket more ruffles are apparent on the dress.

That lovely Mexican product, Dolores Del Rio, sets off her Latin good looks with a hand-painted cotton evening gown in pottery colors, dull, yet glowing. This star, who has always had a flair for simplicity in her clothes, is a pleasant person on whom to rest the eye in this dress which consists of a blouse and skirt with no embellishment but a shirred flounce at the knee that trails off into a lengthy train.

Crystal Jewels Are Made to Suit The Individual

Clips, Bracelets, Et Cetera, Put Together While You Wait.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A BIT OF personality around your throat, or dangling from the lobes of your ears. Personality plus on the band of your hat, or worn in the knot on the back of your head. Personality expressed in terms of crystals.

A downtown store which stays on the tips of its toes in regard to new merchandising projects is promoting this "personality jewelry." They brought a man and woman from New York to design it for Washington customers. And they make it while you wait!

They stand back of a counter loaded with small crystals, all shapes and all colors. There are a number of clips, bracelets, necklaces, earrings, and hair ornaments already made up. A customer may use these as patterns, vary them to suit her, or call for a new design. If she leaves it to the craftsman he will endeavor to give her something to suit her. He studies the face, and designs the jewelry for the individual. If you are purchasing gifts for friends, he likes to have their description.

Numbers of shoppers who experience difficulty in getting becoming earrings have an easy time here. The gentleman whose business it is to be discriminating can tell at a glance whether one should have long or short drops, buttons, or what. He is generous with his suggestions, but amiable about catering to one's taste.

The jewelry is selling from 59 cents to $2.

Before And After.

A special display in a local store brings to light a remarkable "before and after" miracle. There's a small tin of caked power, complete with sponge. It looks uninteresting. But when the sponge is dampened, rubbed over the cake and then wiped over a glass surface, something happens. The glass is immediately bereft of dirt and dust, but instead of just a dull cleanliness, it begins to shine like a polished diamond.

As most housewives know, it isn't difficult to find a window cleanser, but it's a task to find cleanser and polisher, equally good in both ways. Here's one though, that costs a paltry 35 cents. And—believe it or not—one tin is said to last the average housekeeper one year.

• • • •

Antique Handbags.

A very modern store has some interesting antiques. They're evening purses made of old brocade. Years ago hands worked assiduously over a small loom to turn out the finely woven material. Eyes grew weary over the detailed designs. Ladies with hoop-skirts and powdered wigs carried them. And then they were put aside.

Now they're at this shop, waiting for the sleek miss of to-day. Each purse has a little comb inside enclosed in a case of brocade. One of the prettiest sets is of a dusky color scattered over with deep rose bouquets.

• • • •

Another Sun Oil.

Another new sun oil! This one is made from pure oils known and used for centuries. But added to it is a new element, the product of experiments in blood and skin chemistry. It is said to increase and protect the natural oil in the skin, thereby balking the efforts of the sun to burn, but allowing a smooth tan. It is scented with a delightful odor, made famous in a popular bath oil.

It comes in a flask-shaped bottle with a yellow label, symbolizing the sun and the sea. The bright blue of the flask makes it practical for the beach, as it is difficult to lose in the sand.

• • • •

Silver, Way Down.

Just a few more days left for a bargain silver purchase. Until June 9 one may buy a fine quality of Community plate, a service for six, at a vastly reduced rate. And along with the set comes a large serving tray, beautifully designed. If one chooses the service for eight a large well and tree platter goes along with it.

Another feature of this sale is the 6-piece set in the Gloria pattern for $6.95. The quality is exemplified in the hollow handled dinner knives.

• • • •

For Nearly Nothing.

There'll be no drought for those who have a daily shower in their homes. And the equipment can be bought for 58 cents!

Thanks to a June sale, a downtown store is selling all kinds of things, including such summer necessities as bath sprays, for half their usual price. These are available in pastel shades of blue, jade and red.

Conveniently Curved.

A two-edged razor designed for women sells for 25 cents in a local shop. Their convenient curve facilitates safe usage. Their attractive tortoise-colored composition handles make a pair, ornamental for milady's boudoir.

When in Doubt About Cool Dessert Hostesses Now Choose Ice Cream

Mr. Farley Eats This All-American Dish by the Quart.

By Ann Barrett.

FROM now on, when in doubt about dessert choose ice cream. Everybody likes it. And there are those (like Postmaster General William Farley) who count it a downright diversion. There's nothing that pleases Mr. Farley more, after a hard day's work, than to spoon his way through a quart or so of good ice cream.

Buying it ready made is, of course, the easiest way to have it. And a good way, too, since American ice cream is rated the best in the world.

But making it at home is a fine art these days, too, if you mind the do's and dont's. Some of these are: Freeze slowly when you use the crank method, but fast (in the coldest section) when you use an automatic refrigerator. Remember that flavor freezes out, so if you like high flavoring, allow for this fact. Sweetness freezes out, too, but beware of using too much sugar, as it retards freezing. For a thickening ingredient, cream is the richest and easiest to use. But the following are also good: Eggs, condensed or evaporated milk, cornstarch, flour, quick-cooking tapioca, gelatin, light corn syrup, marshmallows and rennet tablets or powders. Here are some recipes that show what I mean:

Nut Caramel Ice Cream.

For an extra delicious cream (if you like caramel flavor) here's how: First melt ½ cup sugar in a heavy skillet, stirring carefully so it won't burn. When it turns amber color, slowly stir in ½ cup boiling water. Remove from fire when it is cooked to a thick syrup. Then beat 2 egg yolks and 1½ tablespoons brown sugar together with fork, and slowly pour caramel syrup into them. Cook this mixture over hot water 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Then cool it and add ⅛ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon vanilla. When perfectly cold fold in 1¾ cups whipping cream (first whipped medium stiff). Turn into coldest tray of automatic refrigerator and freeze, stirring from front to back every hour for 3 hours. After last stirring fold in two-thirds cup chopped toasted almonds or pecans. (Freeze this in crank freezer if you like.)

Banana Ice Cream.

Another good cream—made from old friend banana—goes like this: First press some good, ripe bananas through a sieve to make two-thirds cup smooth pulp. To this add two-thirds cup sugar, few grains of salt, 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Then fold in 1½ cups whipping cream (first whipped medium stiff). Freeze in automatic refrigerator, stirring from front to back every hour till frozen. Or freeze in crank freezer. (For a less rich cream, use 1½ cups light cream instead of heavy cream. Or 1 cup heavy cream and ½ cup milk.)

Pineapple-Berry Sherbet.

When you want the refreshing flavor of tart fruit in a sherbet, you'll find nothing better than that famous combination of pineapple and strawberry, treated this way: First crush some strawberries to make ¾ cup. Then grate ¾ cup fresh pineapple. Next, boil up 2 cups water and 1 cup sugar for 10 minutes. Add the pineapple and boil 2 minutes more. Add the strawberries and just bring to a boil again. Next, remove mixture from fire and add 1½ teaspoons unflavored gelatin first soaked in 2 tablespoons cold water. Then chill mixture and add 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Beat mixture with rotary beater about 2 minutes. Last, fold in 2 stiffy-beaten egg-whites. Freeze in automatic refrigerator, stirring from front to back every 30 minutes till frozen. Or freeze in crank freezer.

Grape Juice Ice.

For that ever-popular grape juice flavor in a cool, refreshing ice, here's how: First boil 1 cup sugar and 2 cups water 5 minutes. Then remove from fire and add 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin first soaked in 1 tablespoon cold water. Cool mixture. Then add ½ cup strained orange juice, ¼ cup lemon juice, 1 cup grape juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind. Freeze in automatic refrigerator, stirring frequently. When nearly frozen, turn mixture into bowl and beat with rotary beater. Return to refrigerator and finish freezing. Or do all the freezing in crank freezer.

Send for More Recipes.

How about chocolate and vanilla ice cream—those two most popular of all flavors? Well, I didn't give these recipes here, because I've given them before. Home-Made Variety Needs Care, But Not Too Much of It.

English and Chinese Trends Appear in Summer Jackets

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Though it's still smart to, you don't have to "join the navy" to have a sports jacket this summer. In the old days, getting a jacket meant getting a double-breasted, navy blue flannel, cut on naval officer lines. But this year you have your choice of this plus an English type, a Chinese type and two or three that are quite mannish in a civilian way rather than a marine way.

That's a modified Chinese type jacket sketched at the left. It hangs loose on those boxy lines associated with coolie coats and Chinese blouses. Often this jacket has a real Mandarin type collar... the one that stands up close around the throat.

These loose jackets range from hip to fingertip length, somewhat longer than the other smart jackets of the season. Those extend to just below hip length, the same length as most of the tailored suit jackets.

Mannish Type.

One of the civilian mannish types is shown at the right. This, as you see, is cut something like the coat of a man's suit. A little more fitted at the waistline, to be sure, but easy fitting and masculine.

If you go English in your sports costume you'll like the Norfolk type jacket. This, as you know, has its back pleated for free action and is well equipped with pockets.

There are innumerable uses for these jackets. You'll see them over golf and tennis dresses. They'll accompany separate skirts, matching or contrasting, to make a sports suit. They're handy to have to slip on with spectator sports dresses. Or even to wear over your bathing suit when a chill wind blows up.

Flannel Still Popular.

Flannel is as popular a material as ever. Wool jersey and checked woolens are smart. Gabardine is a good choice for a mannishly cut jacket, since men's jackets are often made of this material.

Linens and cottons have their place, too, in plain colors, checks, tweed and twill effects, and herringbones. Pique is liked in both plain and novelty weaves; cotton or wool knits are extremely practical, and washable velveteen in bright colors is one of the newest ideas.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Smart jackets of the types described may be found in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Vitamins in Some Foods.

Some of the foods that are richest in certain vitamins are given as follows:

Vitamin A—Fish oils and fats, butter, egg yolk, milk, cheese, liver, green vegetables. Certain roots, for instance carrots, carry large amounts of it.

Vitamin B complex — Whole cereals, beans, peas, lentils, fruits, nuts, milk, cheese, egg yolk, liver, and kidney. Yeasts belong to this group. The B group includes those vitamins which protect against pellagra.

Vitamin C — Fresh fruits and green vegetables, including potatoes and carrots.

Vitamin D—The best sources are the fish oils and fats, egg yolk, milk, butter, and liver. Fish liver fats are good sources of both A and D.

Most authorities are pretty well agreed that the state of nutrition of the people has not been dangerously lowered by the depression. This is true of the United States.

Post Mystery Solution Contest Closes Tonight

Get Your "Confession" in Before Midnight and Maybe Win a Prize.

MIDNIGHT tonight is the deadline for submitting solutions to The Talking Sparrow Murders. The contest, being conducted by The Washington Post, will provide the winner with a new summer outfit, or a luxurious vacation, depending upon how he or she chooses to spend the $100 in cash offered as first prize.

It is not too late to enter the contest, if you have read The Talking Sparrow Murders, which has been appearing daily in The Post. Simply write your own ending to the story, in not more than 500 words. This should take the form of a confession of the criminal, or the principal criminal if you believe that the evidence presented indicates that more than one person was involved. Write in pencil, ink or on the typewriter. So long as it is not more than 500 words, your "confession" will be eligible. Only employes of The Post and members of their families are barred from participation.

The prizes all are worth while. One hundred dollars cash, first prize; $50 in cash for second prize. Third prize insures entertaining reading for a year to come, for it is a subscription to The Crime Club, Inc. This publishing house needs no introduction to mystery fans. It is famous for the quality of the detective novels issued under its name. One each month will be delivered to the third prize winner for a full year, exactly as if a Crime Club subscription were ordered from your local book store.

Next there will be six prizes of $10 each and five of $5 each, all cash. The last 20 prizes will be copies of "Shadow on the Wall," a new book by H. C. Bailey, author of "The Red Castle Mystery" and other stories about that ace detective, Mr. Reginald Fortune. The books are in the office of The Post now, awaiting the winners.

Remember the deadline—midnight tonight. Deliver your solution to The Post before that time, or mail it so that it is postmarked before midnight. Address The Talking Sparrow Murders Contest, in care of The Washington Post.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

If June 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 11:45 a. m. to 1:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until 12:45 a. m.

On this date the element of uncertainty will possibly affect some business deals which are pending. By carefully watching whatever irons you have in the fire, the probability is that nothing will go amiss. Care should be exercised that there are no reasons for rectifying mistakes, for if they are made, a lack of confidence might result. Entertainments of a social nature will result in the closer cementing of friendly relations, which may ultimately lead to influential and worth-while connections. Sagacity should be exercised in the writing of either business or social letters, and if they are important, care must be used to assure their safe delivery. Married as well as engaged couples may find this day more auspicious for the discussing of serious and pratical matters than indulging in overdoses of sentimentality. It is just as well to bear in mind that affection in broken doses at times is more appreciated, and is not as likely to prove as satiating or irksome as an overabundance tactlessly administered. During the entire day, it will be desirable to exercise a great deal of self-control.

The woman born on June 5 is blessed with an unusual amount of "gray matter" for business details, and should prove very successful in any form of office work involving responsibility and initiativeness. Frankness is an admirable characteristic, and one that will gain you many admirers. While not prudishly conventional, there are certain well-founded rules governing polite society you wisely refuse to ignore. It will be entirely a matter of individual preference whether you marry or remain single; your happiness does not depend on either.

The child born on June 5 will grow up a perfectly healthy, happy youngster, possessing all the faults as well as the lovable attributes the average bright child has. Its development, both physical and mental, will be largely governed by environment, and the educational advantages it is given. The parents' care will be reflected by this child.

The man born on June 5 has an unusual capacity for work, a practical brain, and a great deal of originality. As a rule being a moneymaker, he will prove an excellent provider for his family. If born on this date, an early marriage and a home of your own should create a happy state of mind. June 5 is a day requiring personal attention be given personal affairs. Do not ask others to do what you can do yourself.

Successful people born on June 5:
Henry Wurtz, chemist.
George T. Angell, philanthropist.
Columbus Delano, Congressman.
Lyman Spalding, physician.
William Sprague, manufacturer.
Bushrod Washington, jurist.

Bedspreads Make $1,000,000 Industry

DALTON, Ga., June 4 (U.P.)—Out of the depression has developed a picturesque "million dollar industry" of making candlewick bedspreads in this territory.

Tourists find the bedspreads, beautifully made in bright colors, hung out in the front yards to attract buyers.

To Mrs. W. S. Whitener, in the western part of Whitfield County, goes the credit for first "discovering" candlewick bedspreads.

Mrs. Whitener had sent some of the spreads to relatives and was surprised to learn that they attracted so much attention in other parts of the country that a market could be found for them. In this district the bedspreads had been made for years simply as pretty covers for the guest-room. But now they are shipped in large quantities to stores all over the nation.

Approximately 10,000 candlewick bedspreads are shipped daily. They represent the output of the twenty-three "spread sheds" that operate in this district.

Last year about $400,000 was paid in wages alone. There were benefits in addition to the makers of cloth, yarns and other necessary material, the shippers, the haulers and laundrymen.

Westminister, Md., June 4 (Spl.). The second annual religious drama festival, sponsored by the Carroll County Council of Religious Education, first scheduled during May and later postponed until fall, will be held at the Skyesville Methodist Episcopal parish hall, June 21.

Mrs. Miles S. Reifsynder, Westminister, director of the young peoples department of Carroll County, will supervise the dramas, assisted by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, dramatic instructor at Westminister Theological Seminary, and Mrs. C. H. Richmond, Sykesville, chairman of the festival committee.

Hitz Disagrees As Colleagues Kill Stock Suit

Appeals Court Reverses $2,500 Judgment Given Woman Investor.

In a majority opinion written by Associate Justice D. Lawrence Groner, the District Court of Appeals yesterday reversed a $2,500 judgment given Grace L. Hutton in a suit against the Capital Title & Guarantee Co., Inc., and the New York Title & Mortgage Co., although a sharp dissenting opinion was issued by Justice William Hitz.

Miss Hutton, it was shown, went to a local bank in 1929, and asked the cashier to purchase for her listed New York Stock Exchange shares. Instead, she said, he told her that stock in the Capitol Co. was a better investment. Later on a salesman came to her home and showed her circulars in which a letter of the New York company was incorporated.

The letter, written by an attorney of the New York company, said that its experts had examined the local plant and found it to be one of the "finest title plants in existence, including every modern feature for accurate and expeditious title service."

Held as Title Letter.

The plaintiff purchased the stock and when it proved valueless brought suit against both companies. Only the New York company appealed. In reversing the opinion the appellate court held that the letter was written only to secure title business and not for the purpose of stock selling.

However, in a dissenting opinion, Justice Hitz said that "the thorough examination by experts consisted of a short visit to the plant in Baltimore, by two men from New York, neither of whom had ever examined a title in the District.

"My examination of the record leaves me no doubt that the plant was a fake; that the inspection was a farce, and that the statement touching both was false within the knowledge of the man who made it, who was one of the so-called 'experts' making the so-called 'examination.'

Cites Case Comparison.

"If the maker of this statement had negligently scratched the plaintiff's arm with his pen, he or his company would have been liable for the resulting damage, and if his negligence in the use and custody of what he writes with the same pen results in equal or greter damage, he or his company should be similiarly liable, for 'there can be no controlling difference between damage to the person and damage to the purse.'"

The case was ordered sent back for retrial in the District Supreme Court. The theory of the Hutton suit was that the "misstatements" in the letter led her to believe the Capitol stock was a good purchase.

Mortgage Aid Bill Favored

90-Day Formal Notice of Foreclosure Provided in Measure.

Holders of mortgages in the District must give property owners 90 days formal notice through the courts before they can foreclose under terms of a bill reported favorably to the Senate yesterday by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the District Committee.

Notice of intention to foreclose must be filed with the auditor of the District Supreme Court. At the expiration of the 90-day period the auditor reports to the court, which may then fix a date for sale or other disposition of the property to satisfy the mortgagee.

The bill also provides appointment of receivers for rents of properties thrown into foreclosure proceedings. Receivers' fees were limited to not more than 2 per cent of the first $5,000 above the mortgage amount with a $50 minimum. The auditor is authorized to charge fees up to $25.

Dock Strikers Plan New Union

San Francisco, June 4 (AP).—Efforts to form a new longshoremen's union were launched here and at Portland today as mediators continued their efforts to settle the longshoremen's strike which had tied up shipping along the Pacific Coast.

At Portland, newspaper advertisements announced "a committee of registered longshoremen has been organized for the purpose of forming a conservative union and returning to work under proper protection and provision."

Baby Girl Steals the Show As Witness in Cruelty Trial

Woman Is Acquitted on 'Testimony' of Child, 18 Months Old.

Smiling coyly, and apparently keenly interested in her first court experience, an 18-month-old baby girl literally "stole the show" yesterday when she was taken into the District Supreme Court to appear in connection with a case against her aunt.

The aunt, Jessie I. Ritchie, 29, was charged with mistreating her, but when the baby, in the arms of a policewoman, was on her way to the witness room, she reached out her arms and tried to touch Miss Ritchie. The latter sobbed openly as the baby was taken away to await a call before the jury.

The Government charged Miss Ritchie abused the baby in an I street rooming house last April. The infant, it was alleged, was ill and was not properly fed. Among other charges was one that she had been fed a fried egg sandwich at a time when she needed medical care.

Justice Joseph W. Cox directed a verdict acquitting Miss Ritchie when it was shown that the landlady had cared for the baby, and that she had been taken to Gallinger hospital for treatment. Yesterday she appeared to be in the best of health, and was unusually plump.

The baby is the daughter of Miss Ritchie's brother, who lives in Charlotte, N. C. After the trial was over the baby was taken back to Gallinger hospital. She will be turned over to members of her family as soon as possible.

10,000 Fight Fans See Risko Battle Brown at Griffith Stadium

Ross Is Hailed At Chicago By 3,000

Hometown Boy Parades in Triumph Through City Streets.

Irish Mayor, Irish Cops Mark Welcome of Irish Champ's Conqueror.

CHICAGO, June 4 (AP).—Mama Rasofsky always said her boy, Barney, would be a great man some day.

Today her dream came true, as Barney Ross came home to receive one of the most tumultuous welcomes in Chicago's history. He came home no just a world's boxing champion, but as a triple title holder, to be greeted by Gov. Henry M. Horner, Mayor Edward J. Kelly and the multitudes.

Down through a lane of good Irish policemen Mama Rasofsky's son rode in triumph.

3,000 in Train Shed.

More than 3,000 persons gathered in the train shed at the Union Station, overflowed into the lobby and out in the plaza to greet the 24-year-old Jewish lad, who a week ago tonight conquered Jimmy McLarnin in New York, becoming the first boxer to hold both the lightweight and the welterweight championships of the world simultaneously.

ROSS.

A 30-piece band blazed away, sirens of escorting police cars shrieked, and Barney Ross was perched on the tonneau of an open automobile, to head a parade that took him to city hall. There Mayor Edward J. Kelly and political leaders awaited to shake the hand of the dapper, personable young Ross, and extended to him greetings that brought tears to his eyes.

At the City Hall, Ross scored a knockout as a speech maker.

"I'm beginning to appreciate the spirit of Irish good will," he said.

Owes Much to Irish.

"I won the welterweight championship a week ago this night in New York from an Irishman with the good name of McLarnin. I was met at the station by a hundred policemen with Ireland written all over their faces. Now, I am receiving cheering words from the mayor blessed with the name of Kelly. I am almost ashamed I licked an Irishman. They are great people and sportsmen. None better."

Presenting Ross with a giant golden key to the city, Mayor Kelly said:

"I need not tell you how happy we are to greet you, Barney—not only as champion, but as triple champion."

Ross beamed in excitement and enjoyment in his modest way, calling practically everybody who shouldered his way in to shake his hand by his first name, and smilingly accepted the congratulations extended him.

Kingwood, W. Va., June 4 (Spl.). One of the best golf scores ever recorded in West Virginia has been made on the course of the Kingwood Country Club at Caddell by Bud Whetsell, 17-year-old star of the club. He played around the course with a score of 32, 4 under par.

The former record, a 33, was established some time ago by James Spencer, while club professional. The best previous amateur score was a 34, made by James Loar, of Kingwood, Whetsell is one of the entries in the State amateur championship tournament July 2-7 at White Sulphur Springs.

What's in a Name? The Rosses Have 3

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—There are three different names on the mailbox of Barney Ross' home, 1307 Independence boulevard, shared by his white-haired mother and brothers.

The names are:

Mrs. Sarah Rasofsky, which is the family name.

Barney Ross, which sounded better to the world's welterweight, junior welterweight and lightweight champion, than Rasofsky.

And last the name Rasof, which Barney's brothers adopted by knocking the "sky" off the family name.

Macks Here For 2 Tilts Today

Weaver and Crowder Get Call as Nats Seek to Redeem Selves.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

SHORN of their first-division ranking for conduct unbecoming a pennant winner since their return from the West, the Nats today face a glowing opportunity to redeem themselves when Griffith Stadium opens for business again with a bargain attraction in the form of a double-header with the Athletics.

Despite the Nats' seeming retreat toward the nether regions of the league standings on the impetus of three lickings in four battles with the lately-departed Red Sox, they are but 3½ games out of first place and still to be reckoned with in the pennant scramble, barring their complete collapse in the current home stand which will see every club in the league invading Griffith Stadium.

No Two-Team Race.

But their slogan of "Beat the Yankees" is becoming slightly clouded by the presence of the Indians, the Tigers and the Browns in the first division, and visions of a two-team pennant race are broadening perceptibly to include besides the Yankees both the Tigers and the Injuns. Any sustained occupancy of the first division by the Browns can still be regarded only as a miracle, which, nevertheless are known to happen.

A margin of only one game is separating the first three clubs in the standings and the Browns, in fourth place, are only three games out of the top, thus it behooves the Nats to be on their mettle against every invader if any appreciable ground is to be gained on the protracted home stand.

Manager Joe Cronin dismissed his lads fro mpractice yesterday in deference to their four strenuos games in three days with the Red Sox, but he has his two most potent right-handers, Monte eWaver and Al Crowder, gromed for the double bill with the Athletics today.

A's In Seventh Place.

The visiting ball players from Philadelphia come to Washington as a seventh-place club, pining for some decent pitching that would be commepsurate with the remainder of the make-up of the team's cast, whose powerful attack and glittering defense is being sacrificed on the altar of the kind of pitching that Ted Husing had a word for.

With the failure of oJhnny Marcum, the right-hander whose pitching late last season stamped him as a powerful addition to Connie Mack's staff, the Aehlics are sadly in want of consistent pitching. Today, Mack will start John (Sugar) Cain, who had great success against the Nats last year, and Leroy Mahaffey, the southpaw who has been the club's outstanding hurler this season.

Foxx Is Feared.

Jimmy Foxx also will be present, battling for the lead in the home run derby, in which he is locked with Lou Gehrig and Zeke Bonura for the lead with 13 homers each. Foxx has always been productive in Griffith Stadium and is a prime reason why Manager Cronin is starting his right-handed pitchers today.

Shoddy fielding has been going hand in hand with puny hitting to account for the Nats' recent losses. Grievous errors by Joe Kuhel and Buddy Myer in the Red Sox series were almost directly accountable for two of the three defeats sustained at the hands of Boston, and the team's hitting, except in isolated cases, has declined sadly.

Buddy Myer, Heinie Manush and Cecil Travis have been maintaining a high level at the plate, but Cronin, himself, is showing little improvement in his stickwork and Fred Schulte and Joe Kuhel have not been productive since the club returned from the West.

Advising Anna Finishes Fast to Score Easily

Washington Park, Ill., June 4 (AP). Showing a decided liking for the first sloppy going of the Washington Park meeting, Advising Anna, running in the colors of Mrs. Jack Howard, of Louisville, easily won the one mile feature today.

Advising Anna was held in restraint most of the way, but finished fast and beat D. Grant's Tombone by three lengths. Navanod, from the Brentwood Stable, was third, Advising Anna, as the favorite, paid $3.82 to win.

Baer's Pilot Fears for Carnera

Believes Blow to Overtaxed Heart of Primo Would Prove Fatal.

Baer Really Working; Both Fighters Have Killed Opponents.

By Paul Gallico.

ASBURY, N. J., June 4.—Master Baer drilled a right hand under the heart of Dynamite Jackson here this afternoon, and Dynamite, who is a sort of a fair brunette in tint turned ashen gray around the gills.

Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, shook his head and then nibbled at his fingernails for a moment. We were sitting together and he said--"See—there it is. If the commission won't guarantee adequate medical protection at the ringside, I don't want Baer in there against that giant. Baer has killed one man, and nearly did two others in the ring. We don't want another on our hands.

"Carnera's heart has been overtaxed for years, lugging that enormous hulk around must have weakened it and enlarged it. When Baer drills him under it with small gloves on, I want to know that there is an ambulance waiting and ready. We want to win. But we want no more blood on our hands. If Carnera were normal it would be different, but you never can tell what is wrong with those giants inside."

Mr. Hoffman Serious.

I said—"Come now, Mr. Hoffman surely you are pulling my leg. I have a certain notion myself that Baer might kill or seriously injure Carnera if he ever caught him with his hands down. You mean you are seriously considering official action?"

"Serious?" said Mr. Hoffman—"Lissen, he punched Campbell to death. He had a narrow escape with Schaff, who collapsed in the dressing room and remained in a coma for three hours. He was so afraid of permanently injuring Tuffy Griffiths that I had to tell Max in his corner if he carried him and didn't knock him out, the commission would hold up his money. We know that Baer is a fatal hitter. Why not take precautions before hand and not when it is too late. Nobody has ever been hit the way Max will hit Carnera, somewhere along in the fight. I want first aid nearby, and I am going to ask the commission to guarantee it."

Suspects Some Hokum.

I suspect that old Ancil was speaking half for the press and half from belief. I don't believe everything I am told by a fight manager, but for a time I have had a curious picture in my mind—Carnera rendered semiparalyzed or helpless by a punch, reeling with his hands down, and Baer blasting pitilessly at his head. Blow's from Baer's long whip-cord arms, propelled by those amazing shoulders of his are like being struck across the side of the head with a baseball bat. It mightn't be a bad idea at that to be prepared. No matter what the future, this much is certain out of the records of the past. This is the first heavyweight championship fight on record between two men each weighing over 200 pounds, each of whom has killed a man in the ring.

Baer is unquestionably rounding into shape. He has begun to ask plaintively for a little female companionship. "I love to be read to" Baer pleaded with Hoffman and Cantwell. "I love to lie on a chaise-longue or divan and have some one read to me after supper, when the dishes have been put away and the lights are low.

Feminine Voice Soothes.

"It soothes me to have a soft feminine voice reading to me about Little Dorritt, or Tiny Dorritt or Tiny Tim. Association with the rough vulgar characters which abound in training camps eventually react on my nerves. Couldn't I just have a manicurist or a masseuse or even a nice waitress come over and read to me for a while. Surely, that is not asking an awful lot, boys, is it?"

Don't let them scare you with those stories of how bad Baer looks in his work. Certainly he looks terrible. He always does. But brothers, and sisters, he is working. Yes he is. Nine rounds of boxing today, four on the bags and then his amazing set of body exercises. He knows that not his boxing skill, but his condition will win the fight. He is training himself to be able to hit a lethal punch from the first round to the last. He will in all probability lose every round except the one in which he knocks Carnera out.

As Jack O'Brien says, a man who wasn't serious about winning would hardly do the amount of work that Baer is putting away. And an Army officer said that he caught Baer in the woods at Indian Springs, at a quarter to six in the morning, ten miles from home, running, feinting, shadow boxing. Never mind about his boxing! He's getting in shape.

Little Is Back, Pessimistic Over Open

He and Walker Cup Team Return From Europe; 'Fluke,' He Says.

BOSTON, June 4 (AP).—For sheer modesty you have to hand it to W. Lawson Little, third American to annex the British amateur golf championship, and to his Walker Cup teammates.

They came home today like so many Gil Dobies, of Cornell football coaching fame.

They discussed their chances in the National Open at Merion this week, after the S. S. Laconia had docked from England, and here's what they said:

Little, who gave one of the greatest exhibitions of competitive golf playing in championship history to win the British title:

"I'll be bumped off so soon at Philadelphia that you will know my success at Prestwick and my 14 and 13 victory over Jimmy Wallace was a fluke.

"Way Over His Head."

"No, there is no chance of my duplicating Bobby Jones' grand slam. I played away over my head in England. I shudder to think what our crack pros will do to us at Merion."

Johnny Goodman, who will defend his open title at Merion and who feels the same about his own game as does Little: "I have never seen a golfer as long and as accurate as Lawson. I'm picking him for the open, and I think Paul Runyan is the only one who can stop him. All I'm hoping is that I will be able to survive the first 36 holes."

Besides Little and Goodman the party included Jack Westland, Gus Moreland, Max Marston and John Fischer. Returning with them were Jesse Guilford, 1921 amateur titlist; Jack Dawson, former amateur star, and others.

Goose Goslin Provides Spark For Tigers' Drive to 2d Place

DETROIT, June 4 (AP).—The flashing bats of Detroit's "Three Musketeers"—Goose Goslin, Charley Gehringer and Manager Mickey Cochrane—are leading the no-longer kittenish Bengals in a wild charge toward American League pennant heights that has Detroit's fandom cheering.

A year ago the Tigers were in the second division—and floundering badly. Today, after a brief Western trip in which they won five of seven games, they are in second place, only a half-game back of the league-leading Yankees. And to the "Three Musketeers" goes most of the credit for the Bengals' improvement.

Goslin, traded for Johnny Stone, now with Washington, has provided the spark which Gehringer and Cochrane are fanning with extra base hits. "As Goslin goes so go the Tigers" has become the fan's cry—and Sunday "The Goose" hit safely in his twenty-eighth game.

"This team is sure going places," Goslin said today as he checked on his batting average and found it well over .300. "We got real spirit and the boys want to win. We had a tough time getting started, but now we ought to keep going in a big way. The warm weather was just what we need and it won't help other clubs with older men in their line-ups. I can't say how far we'll go, but the team that wins the pennant will be one which can win consistently for a time—and watch out for us."

Gehringer, always dependable, is carefully nursing along a .365 average at the plate. Batting in clean-up position, "Silent Charley" steadied the Bengals when they wavered and has been the hub of the Tiger defense, as well as offense since the season opened.

Cochrane, the peppery manager, has provided the color for the trio. Injecting himself into games as a pinch-hitter, he twice delivered with hits that meant victories. Finding his batting eye a few weeks ago, he has clawed himself into a near .300 average, and appears to be bearing out the fans' hope that the Tigers "will go some place when Mickey starts socking that apple."

Odds on Colombo 13 to 8 in London

Shortest Price in Years Is Quoted on Derby.

London, June 4 (AP).—The odds against Lord Glanely's unbeaten colt, Colombo, winning the British Derby Wednesday shortened again in today's call-over. His price receded from 7 to 4 to 13 to 8—shortest odds in years for a favorite in the classic.

The French colt, Easton, and Aga Khan's Umidwar remained bracketed as second choices at 10 to 1 with Windsor Lad the third choice at 100 to 9.

Other odds quoted today were: Mediaeval Knight, Admiral Drake and Tiberius, all 25 to 1; Alishah, 26 to 1; Valerius and Badruddin, 33 to 1; Bondsman, 45 to 1; Rathmore, 50 to 1; On Top, Primero, The Ruthless Abbot, all 66 to 1; Hornsey Rise and Fleetfoot, 100 to 1; Pride of Chilterns, 125 to 1; Baron Munchausen 140 to 1.

Cactus Rose Is Victor At Latonia, Pays $16.20

Latonia Race Track, Latonia, Ky., June 4 (AP).—Given a rousing ride by Apprentice D. Taylor and running one of the fastest three-quarters of the current meeting, the Parkview Stable's Cactus Rose raced to a thrilling and surprising victory in today's feature, the Bosque Bonita Purse.

W. E. Smith's Likewise, winner of two headliners last week, was second and J. W. Parrish's New Deal, the favorite, third. Cactus Rose was an outsider in the small field, paying $16.20 for $2. The 6-furlong spin was run in 1:12 3-5.

Spencer-Barr Victorious At Manor

Card Net 70 to Win Mixed Scotch Play; 11 Teams Vie for Honors.

GLENN SPENCER, professional, and Mrs. C. C. Barr, both of the Maryland Country Club, Baltimore, carried off top honors in the mixed Scotch foursome tournament sponsored by the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. at the Manor Club course yesterday.

They carded a net of 78—8—70.

Bob Barnett and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, of Chevy Chase, tied for second prize with Eddie Stevens, assistant pro, and Mrs. B. C. Hartig, of Manor, and Ralph Beach and Mrs. Jerome Sloman, of Suburban, Baltimore. Barnett and Mrs. Booker had 78—5—73; Stevens and Mrs. Hartig, 79—6—73, and Beach and Mrs. Sloman, 78—5—73.

The Spencer-Barr combination played steadily after starting off with a 6 on the first hole. At the turn they posted a 38 and played the back nine in 40. A streak of three-putt greens proved costly on a number of holes.

Get 36 on First Nine.

Danny Burton, red-haired pro at Army and Navy, and his feminine partner, Mrs. A. E. Dedicke, teamed harmoniously on the first nine, which they negotiated in 36, low for any one nine. They ran into trouble along the stretch and folded up for a 45. Their 75 net was two strokes out of the prize-winning circle.

Local Boxer Gives Away 15 Pounds

First Big-Time Card in Washington Draws Many Notables.

Farley, Black, Hartley Are Among Devotees at Ringside.

GRIFFITH STADIUM, June 4. Drawn by the magnetism of Washington's first big-caliber fisticuffing contest, some 10,000 fight-starved boxing enthusiasts jammed around and above the ringside here tonight to witness a 10-round encounter between Natie Brown, leading heavyweight contender from Washington, and Johnny Risko, the contender demolisher from Cleveland. With ringside and the better grandstand seats almost completely filled, customers were still trickling into the far-away pews beyond the second base line as the main bout contestants climbed into the ring.

Many notables from many parts of the country rubbed shoulders with the dyed-in-the-wool boxfight contingent, which was present in full force. Postmaster General James A. Farley, himself chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission prior to the election of President Roosevelt, occupied a ringside seat with a party of friends. "Senator" William Lyons, a familiar figure in affairs fistic and the ring world, was seated near the Postmaster General.

Representative Loring M. Black and Ed Hartley, whose combined efforts were responsible for pushing the bill legalizing boxing here through Congress, came early and stayed until the last glove had been pushed. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, an ardent devotee of wrestling and boxing, witnessed the proceedings from a point of vantage near the ring, as did H. A. Adams, president of the General Electric Co.

Apparently in the best physical condition of his long and varied ring career Risko surprised by tipping the beam at 199¾ at the official weighing-in ceremonies today. Many had predicted he would weigh no more than 194 or 195. Brown hit the surprisingly low figure of 184, several pounds below the weight at which he has scored some of his most notable victories.

Pete Powell hammered out an exciting, unanimous decision over Joe Green in a gruelling six-round club fight that opened the proceedings. Obviously hampered somewhat by the 8ounce gloves required by law, Green threw them high, wide and handsome throughout the encounter, while Powell straight-punched and jabbed his way to victory. Powell weighed 117, Green 122.

Bob Turner scored the first legal knockout in the District by forcing referee Robert Morris to intervene in the second round of his fight with Bog Boy Smith of the Eastern Shore, after the big boy had been on the floor three times. The knockout came 1 minute and 40 seconds after the second round opened.

Gould, Righthander, Sold to Chattanooga

Chattanooga, June 4 (AP).—The outright purchase of Bill Gould, right-handed pitcher, with the Buffalo International League club last year, was announced by the Chattanooga Lookouts, of the Southern Association, today.

Good morning! Bathing suits for men were next to nothing last year and now are decidedly nexter. What is left has to be mighty smart in order to be gotten away with. Robes and Pullovers will be welcome for the first chills.

Arab Comes With Rush in Stretch to Annex Charles Town Feature Race by Nose

Choice Beats Rhodius in Struggle

Modern Times Is Third in Test; Doonis Is Winning Jockey.

Daily Double on Clear Knight and Dunwin Pays $14 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight.
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 4.—Arab, a 6-year-old son of Kai Sang, the Chinese horse, is a charter member of the "we-beat-each-other" club in the mountains. Today, the gelding, owned and operated by W. M. Hunt, stuck a schnozzle in front of Rhodius to earn the decision in the feature race on the washday program. Two lengths away from the fighting pair came Modern Times to take the third money.

Arab can't always be depended upon to run his best race, but there are days and days and today evidently was the day. He was certainly on his oats. However, he was made a lukewarm favorite and had every right to strut his stuff to victory if he so desired. And he did.

There was no indication at the start that Arab would be anywhere in particular at finishing time. He was away rather sluggishly on the mile and a sixteenth test whie Hair Trigger, Rhodius and Modern Times stepped off on the front of their hoofs to struggle for pace-setting honors. Little J. Doonis, who had the mount on Arab, seemed to be plenty confident of his charge, for he made no move until the last trip up the back stretch.

At this time Rhodius was burning oil out in front of the field. On the final turn, Arab began a rush that carried him around the leaders as the stretch was reached, and he came on down the line to fight it out with Rhodius. The latter was forced to yield by a few inches in the final strides.

Arab rewarded the faithful with a $7.80 mutuel.

The daily double combination of Clear Knight and Dunwin supplied a pay-off of $14 proportions.

CANOBIE LAKE, away forwardly and having good speed, assumed command at once, saved ground on the rail, and held on gamely for the final drive. DISRUPTION, well up throughout, was overhauling winner at the end. MAPLE SUE raced evenly throughout.

THIRD RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:54. Winner, Claude Feltner's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNWIN, $8.80, $4.80, $3.40; CROSSING OVER, $9.80, $7.60; DARKTOWN, $9.40.

DUNWIN, rated behind the early pace, but within reach of the leaders, circled them when straightened into the home stretch and wore CROSSING OVER down in the final strides. Latter, a forward contender at all times, wore DARKTOWN down in the drive, but could not withstand the challenge of winner. DARKTOWN quit badly after showing good early speed.

THE DAILY DOUBLE PAID $14.00.

FOURTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:25. Winner, L. E. Barnes' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAMPOON, $3.60, $2.80, $2.80; GRAND ROX, $2.80, $2.80; BONNIE LADDIE, $4.80.

LAMPOON, fractious at the barrier, broke from outside the stalls, had good speed to take command at first turn and drew out into a good lead, but had to be hard ridden to stall off GRAND ROX. Latter, taken off the early pace, moved up quickly, went slightly wide, and was wearing winner down. BONNIE LADDIE weakened badly after showing good speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:51. Winner, H. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARAB, $7.80, $4.40, $3.20; RHODIUS, $5.00, $3.00; MODERN TIMES, $2.60.

ARAB was rated off the early pace and on the outside, came around the leaders in the stretch, wore down RHODIUS in the drive, and was up in the final stride. RHODIUS was sent to the front on the back stretch, rated in the lead until the stretch, wore down MODERN TIMES, but Edwards became careless when he had MODERN TIMES beaten and did not ride RHODIUS out until it was too late. MODERN TIMES, a forward factor all the way, could not withstand the challenge of the first two, but held on well. RUSTIC CUBA raced evenly and saved ground on the inside, but could not get up. LAWLESS LADY lacked speed. CANTROUD could not improve his position.

CAPTOR had good speed to take command in the run for the first turn, was rated in front for the balance of the race, and had something in reserve at the finish. BLACK DREAMS, reserved from the early pace, closed resolutely, but could not get to the winner. BLESS HER HEART, rated close to the early pace, was tiring at the end. DAISY BUNGA raced evenly and closed well. DINTA BELLE dropped back after a half mile, but came on again. The others were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:40. Winner, Mrs. F. HOSAIN had good speed to take command at once, drew out into a long lead while being rated in front, saved ground throughout, but had to be fully extended to withstand the bid of ANGRY LASS. The latter, rated closest to the early pace, finished soutly and was wearing the winner down. MISS CATALAN, rated in the early stages, closed well. McDONALD H., well up in the early running, tired. HELEN'S ALIBI could not get up while racing on the outside.

SWEEPING the junior and senior high school classes by wide margins, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School the spotlight in the twentieth annual Montgomery County track and field meet yesterday in the Rockville Fair Grounds before 3,000 spectators and the 5,227 contestants in a day marred only by a last minute shower that delayed the closing events.

Fifteen records weres mashed and two equaled as Bethesda broke the long reign of Rockville High to sweep the two major classes for the second time this has been done in the 20 years. Takoma Park elementary won the gramar school division with 63 points followed by Bethesda with 57. Glenment was the victor in the 3-room-school and over class while Montrose followed by White Oak were the one and two room schools title winners.

In addition to the winners in the divisions, 2,362 students successfully completed their badge tests.

Runner-Up Honors.

Rockville, Sherwood and Silver Spring were closely divided for the runner-up positions, the latter placing third in the junior and senior classes. Rockville was second and fourth and Sherwood fourth and second respectively.

Featuring the day's performances was the broad jumping of Marion Lohr, of Rockville in the girls senior class. Jimmy Henderson, of Silver Spring broke the record in the 220 when he broke the tape at 24 2-5 seconds on a slow track. Benny Vandervoort, of Silver Spring captured the 100-yard dash in thec reditable time of 10 2-5 seconds while Ray Brown, of Bethesda tied the high jump record in the last event of the day.

Rockville swept the relays in the senior class for 30 points, while Damascus and Silver Spring divided the speed ball titles.

First aid stations of the Rockville and Bethesda Fire Departments reported no serious casualties, but treated hundreds of cases of minor cuts and participants overcomeb y the heat.

To Go to Baltimore.

The winners in each class will journey to Baltimore Friday for the State meet in an attempt to take thec rown away from the Baltimore County titleholders. Those making fastest times in each event will make the trip regardless of class. Montgomery finished far down the list last year.

Pro Boxing in Virginia Delayed by Red Tape

Richmond, June 4 (Spl.).—Safeguards against the supposed evils of professional boxing embodied in Virginia's new boxing bill effective June 19, may postpone until far into the summer any matches arranged pursuant to the law, it was learned today.

The safeguard provisions throw red tape into the situation which observers claim is an voluminous as that surrounding the alcoholic beverage control system.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Charles Town, June 4.

I managed to squeeze home four winners while Clocker Mike was batting .500. Clear Knight, Canobie Lake, Lampoon and Arab did their stuff in a big way for me. Mike's success came in the last race when he chased Hosain to the wire, and I wouldn't even show the horse respect enough to put him in the money. However, I bought Mike's dinner again tonight so that makes us even. Pretty nice up here in the mountains. Why not bring the family and picnic on the way home.

BILL.

First race—Schley B. seems to have found a spot where he can shine. Gets in with only steadying weight and has all his speed, according to Clocker Mike. Golden Castle is among the also eligibles. Dangerous if he gets in action. Pukka Heaven to take care of the others.

Second race—You could probably buy this entire field for 33 cents and a couple of cigar coupons. Your guess is as good as mine here, I'll take Nancy Kahn, Golden Vein and Bracola.

Third race—The entry of Noras Grace and Aella is likely to give this crew the one-two punch unless I miss my cue. Both are in excellent shape. Hurry Bye won here Saturday and may surprise by making a money appearance. Serenabit, a recent winner, has a fighting chance.

Fourth race—Polydee is a fair sort of juvenile and make hot foot it home in time to take care of these. Trycook may awake again to fight it out with the top one. Viva Pete for the show end.

Fifth race—Ada Wan can really step on the gas for five furlongs. There are several other speedsters in the group, however. Washout is going to be no easier to catch than he was last out. Silverdale may have needed that last but I'm going to see him run again before putting him on top.

Sixth race—Repeal may have shaken the jinx that has followed him. Certainly turned in an excellent effort in winning last out. He has Unfair and True John to beat.

Seventh race—Fusco needs three scratches before he can get off the reserve list for this race. However, he is far too sharp to be disregarded. Liberty Ace and Aldershot to complete the money picture. Mike likes Dona Dulcin.

Stocks Rally In Dullest Sale Since June, '24

New Buying Lifts Prices; Dealing Is Reduced to 357,540 Shares.

New York, June 4 (AP).—A modest rally lifted stocks today in the smallest market in a decade.

As the market entered the fourth week of extreme dullness, sales on the stock exchange dwindled to 357,540 shares. It was the scantiest business in stocks the exchange had done since June 2, 1924. The turnover then was 305,600 shares.

Rains in some drought areas, improvement in the labor situation and resistance the market showed as it approximated the low levels touched in May, discouraged further liquidation but brought in little new buying.

Prices Rally Easily.

In the absence of selling pressure, prices rallied easily. The market was unusually thin in many issues and several widely separated bid and asked prices were quoted on the ticker tape.

Gains of fractions to 3 points were recorded for such issues as Allied Chemical, American Can, Chrysler, General Motors, Santa Fe, Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel and American Telephone. Rains in Nebraska and elsewhere stimulated short-covering and some outside buying in J. I. Case, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and other shares dependent upon farmer-purchasing power.

The rally raised the average price of 90 stocks to 75.4, up 1.2 points from the 1934 low established Saturday.

Speculation Is Dormant.

Speculation continued dormant. The mixed picture presented by trade and political news confused traders. The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated operations of the industry had risen to 57.4 per cent of capacity, the highest since it began compiling its figures last October, and a gain of 1.3 points over a week ago.

The market paid little attention to the rise in the steel rate, however, attributing it to buying for inventory in anticipation of a possible steel strike and for completion of contracts made before the recent increase in steel prices.

Celanese, Industrial rayon and other textile shares made only a mild response to the passing of a strike threat in the industry. Electric Autolite rallied more than a point on reports the strike in its Toledo plant virtually had been settled. Silver shares did better than the rest of the market, U. S. Smelting & Refining closing 3 points higher.

The Dollar Abroad

London, June 4 (AP).—The United States dollar gained 1⅜ cents to the pound today to close at 5.05¼ to the pound as compared with Saturday's final quotation of 5.06⅝.

On a commercial demand, short traders covered in the belief that the dollar was undervalued and their activity was mainly responsible for the steady day-long improvement from the opening at 5.06½.

Gold currencies were firmer against the British pound, and the French franc closed at 76.75 to the pound as compared to Saturday's close of 77.03.

The price of bar gold was unchanged at 137 shillings, 2 pence ($34.74) a fine ounce and an amount valued at £241,000 ($1,220,665) was sold, apparently to America.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was generally quiet today. Gold mining shares and Argentine rails were firmer, the former on dividend anticipations while Argentine rails advanced on the strength in the wheat position. Other sections reacted on profit taking and the closing tone was weak.

Paris—The entire list on the bourse sagged today in sympathy with lower prices in London and Amsterdam. Electric issues were particularly affected and the closing tone was weak.

Berlin—The tone on the boerse today was cheerful. The public purchased industrials chiefly, on confidence toward a favorable outcome of the Saar question. Easier money was also a factor. The closing was firm.

Federal Expenditures in May the Lowest on an Average Daily Basis Since Last October; Total Now 36 Per Cent Above 1933.

By Ralph West Robey.

In May Federal expenditures were the lowest on an average daily basis since last October. The total outlay was only $549,000,000, an average of $18,000,000 a day. For the fiscal year to the end of the month the total expenditures were $6,372,000,000, against $4,672,000,000 in the corresponding eleven months of the last fiscal year. This is an increase of 36 per cent. Through receipts having increased from $1,793,000,000 to $2,725,000,000, however, the deficit has been held to only 27 per cent more than last year.

These aggregate figures give only an imperfect picture of what has taken place in the way of expenditures since July 1, 1933. In the period our rate of expenditures has been highly irregular, as one plan after another was devised for getting money in circulation. Outstanding in this particular have been the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Civil Works Administration. These two organizations alone have accounted for $2,400,000,000, or 38 per cent, of the total expenditures during the last eleven months.

Except for Three Items Rate Has Been Regular.

Interest payments and purchases for the sinking fund also have contributed to the irregularity of expenditures. If all of these—RFC, CWA (and FERA), and the interest and sinking fund outlay—are left out of the total one finds that the average daily expenditures over the last eleven months have been extremely regular. By months in millions, starting with last July, it has been 7, 7, 9, 11, 9, 8, 10, 11, 9, 8, 10.

When all charges are taken into consideration the average daily figures, by months, run 9-10-11-16-18-22-32-23-20-32-18. The first of these great jumps, from $11,000,000 to $16,000,000 between September and October, was the result of a heavy interest payment. The figure was kept high the next month by large outlays through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the daily average for this alone being $7,200,000. In the following month, December, the RFC increased its outlay slightly, to $7,500,000 a day, and in addition the CWA got started, spending $2,500,000 a day, so that the total climbed to $22,000,000.

Both RFC and CWA Going Full Force in January.

The great peak of $32,000,000 a day in January was attained through both the RFC and the CWA pouring out funds at an incredible rate. The average daily outlay of the RFC in that month was $15,100,000 and of the CWA was $8,100,000. Thereafter the RFC started to make smaller demands upon the Treasury. In February its daily average dropped to $5,300,000, in March to $2,500,000 and in April to $1,700,000. Last month it increased to $3,400,000.

The CWA hit its peak in March with an average daily expenditure of $7,200,000. In April it dropped to $6,400,000 and in May to $3,800,000.

It is apparent, therefore, that unless new devices are discovered for pumping out money we can not anticipate any such deficit within the next year and a half as the President pictured last January. An inflationary course does not depend upon the creation of such agencies, for ample foundation already has been laid to give us a ruinous inflation, but unless other emergency spending programs are started the Government will not be able to force the issue.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 85.5 Level

Fluctuations Are Extremely Narrow; Transfers Total Only $8,522,000.

New York, June 4 (AP).—The bond market moved sluggishly today and while, here and there, issues displayed a firm tone, price changes, as a whole, were extremely narrow.

Transfers totaled only $8,522,000, par value, the smallest volume for a full day in about two weeks, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged at 85.5.

Listed United States Government securities were not particularly enthused over the Treasury's June financing program and the majority were off slightly in a light turnover.

Offerings Are Small.

Traders in the Federals seemed a little disappointed because of the small size of the offering and also because the 3 per cent rate on the new 12-14 year issue appeared to be a little too close to the market. The listed 3s ended at 100.22, off 4-32 of a point.

The decline appeared to be logical in view of the fact that the new 3s will be offered at par.

In some banking quarters the new Government offerings at low interest rate were seen as a test operation having to do with a later conversion plan for the called Liberty Fourth 4¼s.

Holders of the Liberties, it was thought, would be more inclined to convert, in the summer at a much smaller interest rate than wait until October 15, and turn in their bonds at par for cash in view of the probability that the new 3s will be selling at a premium when the Liberty Loan conversion offer is made.

List of Gainers.

There was little news of immediate importance to corporate issues. Gains of 1 to around 2 points in restricted trading were held by American & Foreign Power 5s, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s, Chicago & Northwestern 4¾s, Great Northern 7s, New York Central convertible 6s, Nickel Plate 4½s, Warner Brothers 6s, Northern Pacific 6s and Western Pacific 5s. Union Pacific first 4s edged up to a new year's high. Other prime investment loans hovered around their best 1933 prices.

Foreign obligations were quiet and mixed. Bonds of Belgium, Sao Paulo, France and Sweden improved. Those of Dutch East Indies sagged, as did most of those of Germany and Poland. German Government 7s dropped 1½ points to a new year's low and Italian Kingdom 7s, off 1, equalled this year's lowest figure.

Curb's Prices Close Higher In Light Sales

Utilities and Metals Firm; Trading Is Reduced to 98,000 Shares.

New York, June 4 (AP).—The curb market closed generally higher today in another session of record low volume. Transfers, which approximated only 98,000 shares, represented the smallest turnover for a full trading period since March 30, 1933, when 70,000 shares changed hands.

Advances of fractions to around a point prevailed in final quotations. Utilities and metals displayed mild firming tendencies. Gulf Oil dropped nearly 2 points, but other petroleum shares were steady.

American Cyanamid B, American Gas & Electric, Sherwin Williams, Lynch Corporation and Lake Shore ended around a point higher. Smaller gains were shown by Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil, Greyhound Corporation, Glen Alden Coal and Wright-Hargreaves.

Dealings in distillery shares dwindled to the vanishing point. Hiram Walker gained a shade in a nominal trade.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Lumber—Production and shipment at the mills for the week ended May 26 were the lowest of any week since February the National Lumber Manufacturers Association reports. Orders were the lowest since that month except for one week. The reduced business was said to be partly due to the longshoresmen's strike at Pacific Coast ports.

Hides—Spot hides have sold off another ½ cent a pound under the threat of heavy marketings of cattle as a result of the long period of drought in the West.

Chemicals—Trade interests report a slight upturn in demand for industrial materials. Active retail buying of insecticides has brought better volume in several sections of the market.

Carpet wool—The market has turned dull again after a few weeks of increased buying in anticipation of higher prices which became effective May 21.

Volume of World's Short-Term Debts Seen Shrinking Rapidly

By Anna P. Youngman.

The Bank for International Settlements estimates that the volume of international short-term debt of European countries and the United States declined from 70,000,000,000 Swiss francs at the end of 1930 to 32,000,000,000 Swiss francs at the end of 1933. This rapid liquidation of outstanding obligations has in many cases been achieved at heavy loss to creditors, but it is, nevertheless, a favorable development from the long-time point of view.

The vast volume of short-term funds that has been shifted from country to country in recent years with a view to avoiding losses, or obtaining speculative profits, has been one of the major causes of disastrous bank runs, leading to suspension of gold payments.

These funds have been used to finance chronically unfavorable trade balances, thus piling up debts that could not be liquidated. They have been squandered on nonproductive ventures or, as in Germany, they have been used in place of long-term capital, with the result that a large proportion of supposedly liquid resources has been lost or become hopelessly immobilized.

Aftermath of Lending.

Moratoria, standstill agreements and exchange restrictions of varying degrees of severity have been the aftermath of this unwise lending.

The downfall of the pound sterling was brought about in 1931 by the panicky withdrawal of large amounts of short-term funds of this description. That run followed the central European crisis of 1931, which led to a tie-up of large sums owing to British bankers. Prior to that time, the American speculative debauch had been nourished by extensive movements of short-term funds to the United States to take advantage of high call loan rates. In a sense, therefore, the existence of these floating balances may be regarded as one of the chief reasons for the present disordered state of the world's financial and monetary affairs. However, the building up of these troublesome balances was itself a consequence of the highly abnormal conditions which prevailed during the years following the war.

Had a wise restraint been exercised in applying short-term funds to suitable short-term uses, they probably would have done relatively little harm. But the inflationists credit policies pursued during the years prior to the speculative collapse led to the utilization of these uncertain resources in ways that invited disaster when sudden concerted demands for repayment were made.

Reductions in the volume of international short-term indebtedness have been brought about in various ways. In some cases, creditors have parted with claims to blocked funds at substantial discounts and taken their losses. In other cases, short-term obligations have been funded. Again a considerable reduction in the gold value of outstanding short-term debts represents a writing down of obligations contracted in currencies, such as pounds and dollars, at former gold parities.

Finally, a certain amount of debt has been liquidated by shipments of goods and of gold, and conversion of foreign assets belonging to debtor countries.

London Center of Attraction.

London is again the center of attraction for foreign funds despite losses suffered by foreigners through sterling depreciation. However, the English now appreciate the necessity of making better provision against sudden withdrawals in the light of their past experiences. Indeed it has been suggested that the exchange control fund might become a permanent feature of the London money market, and attempt to differentiate between international capital movements due to fright or speculative activities and movements which result from regular commercial and investment operations.

In the latter case, capital shifts, it is said, might be permitted to affect the exchanges normally, whereas efforts would be made to neutralize the effect of shifts caused by fright or speculative machinations.

Whether such a proposal is practicable or not, the discussion indicates the serious nature of the problem created by the existence of a large mass of funds seeking temporary investment wherever conditions seem best at the moment.

The progress that has been made in eliminating some of this indebtedness is an encouraging development, not only because it is regarded as a necessary preliminary to relaxation of exchange restrictions, but also because it holds out hope of an ultimate return to more stable conditions in international money markets.

United Gas Net To Surplus Is $3,188,167

Amount Represents Gain; N. Y. Phone Increases Stations.

New York, June 4 (AP).—The consolidated income statement of the United Gas Corporation and subsidiaries for the 12 months ended April 30 shows a balance carried to surplus of $3,188,167, which is equal to $7.08 a share on the $7 preferred stocks. This compares with a balance for the 12 months ended December 31, 1933, of $2,267,146, equal to $5.04 a share.

Directors of Nevada-California Electric Corporation have declared the usual quarterly dividend of $1 on the preferred stock and ordered a payment of $3 on account of accumulated dividends payable out of surplus. The regular disbursement is payable August 1 to stock of record June 30, and the accumulated dividend on July 2 to stock of record June 9.

The New York Telephone Co., largest operating affiliate of the Bell System, showed a gain of 6,489 stations in May compared with a gain of 4,474 stations in April and a loss of 14,122 stations in May, 1933.

Directors of the L. A. Young Spring and Wire Co., have declared a dividend of 25 cents a share of the common stock, payable August 1 to stock of record July 16. The last payment was a similar amount on January 3, 1933.

Wheat Drops As Rains Bring Drought Relief

Market Closes Unsettled, 1¼ to 1⅞ Down; All Grains Decline.

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Enough moisture to give at least temporary relief from drought and heat forced a maximum drop of 2¼ cents a bushel in wheat values today.

Reports told of heavy rains in parts of the Northwest and West, whereas other sections received little. The forecast pointed to likelihood of additional showers throughout practically the entire domestic grain belt.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1⅛@1⅞ under Saturday's finish; corn, 1⅞@2¼ down; oats, 2 to 2¼ off, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Outbursts of Selling.

Lively outbursts of selling interspersed with brisk buying on declines characterized the wheat market, but as a rule bearish traders had the whip hand.

At the day's extreme low point, wheat showed 10½ cents fall from Friday's top figures. In the end, all Chicago wheat futures were well below $1 a bushel. Such traders as still clung to the bull side asserted that rains, taken as a whole, were disappointing both in quantity and extent, and that a large part of the crop damage done by drought and abnormal heat was irreparable.

A factor which was made much of in some quarters was that authoritative unofficial crop estimates issued today regarding United States 1934 probable wheat production were the lowest yet this season.

Forecasts of Crops.

One leading Chicago expert forecast the domestic winter wheat yield as 400,000,000 bushels and spring wheat as 118,000,000, this contrasted with recent average unofficial forecast of 420,000,000 bushels winter wheat and 242,000,000 spring. One of the largest elevator companies in the United States figured the domestic winter wheat crop today as promising less than 400,000,000 bushels.

Corn and oats prices gave way with wheat. Weather conditions were regarded as more favorable to the growing corn crop, but rains appeared mostly too late to be of material benefit to oats.

Notwithstanding upturns of hog values, the provision market averaged lower, responsive to weakness of grains.

Steel Operation Rises Despite Down Trends

Capacity Rate Is Pushed to 60 by Artificial Stimulants.

Cleveland, June 4.—While the general trend in steel consumption is slightly downward—based principally on declining automobile production—two factors last week tended to increase specifications and shipments and to rally steelworks operations 3 points to 60 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

The first of these is the reluctance of consumers to lose their equities in second-quarter contracts, with the certainty of higher prices beginning July 1 than they now are paying; and the second is the artificial stimulus supplied by fears of a steel strike.

Notwithstanding the radical statements issued last week by some labor groups, steel makers are taking a hopeful view. The revised steel code, granting certain concessions to labor, goes in effect June 11, and the Washington Administration is trying to avert a strike, set for June 16.

Hesitancy on Orders.

To some extent price provisions of the new code led consumers last week to hesitate in ordering material. Foremost is the amendment which permits producers to file prices, regardless of any question as to their "fairness," and the right of others to meet these prices promptly.

Prices, once filed for a quarter, will be the maximum which can be charged in that period, irrespective of how much costs might be advanced. Apparently, prices will be no higher than named at the outset, but there always will be the possibility of them going lower. Due regard to costs and ethical standards are expected to weigh against unfair competition. To the great majority of consumers changes made in basing points will be of minor significance.

June 11 was set as the effective date for the new code to allow for the ten-day period in which to file new prices. But with few exceptions books were opened June 1 for the third quarter at those prices which were named last April, after consumers had been given the opportunity to cover at lower levels. These prices incorporate the advances ranging from $3 to $8 a ton—offsetting some of the steelmakers' costs in increasing wages.

Heavy Scrap Shipments.

Steelmakers continue to take heavy shipments of scrap, but lack of new buying has resulted in further price reductions at Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland, lowering Steel's iron and steel scrap composite 38 cents to $10.33. For the first time in six weeks, however, the downward trend in scrap prices at Pittsburgh halted, leading to the belief that with strike uncertainties overcome the market will show more stability. Pig iron shipments still are increasing moderately.

Daily average pig iron output in May—66,274 gross tons—was 14.5 per cent higher than in April, and largest since April, 1931. Total output—2,054,507 tons—was 18.3 per cent over the preceding month. Production for five months this year—7,912,747 tons—shows a gain of 149 per cent over the period last year. Stacks active May 31 numbered 115, a net increase of six in the month.

Shape awards for the week dropped sharply to 9,006 tons, holiday influences being adverse. The Navy Department and Shipping Board are cooperating in a proposal to aid in construction of 100 tankships in the next two years, which will require a substantial steel tonnage.

Eastern plate mills are expanding production, largely for railroad equipment requirements. Domestic freight car awards in May totaled 717; for the first five months this year, 21,424, largest for the period since 1930. Rail production in steady. Nickel Plate awarded 1,000 tons of track fastenings.

Steelworks operations last week advanced 3 points to 65 per cent at Chicago; 2 to 63, Youngstown; 3 to 53, Buffalo; 1 to 79, Cleveland and ½-point to 45½, Eastern Pennsylvania. They were reduced 1 point to 50 per cent, Pittsburgh, and were unchanged at 100 per cent, Detroit; 84, New England; 74, Wheeling; 55, Birmingham.

Sheet mill operations, as a National average, last week were 68 per cent, and tin plate production 80 per cent.

Steel's iron and steel price composite is unchanged at $34.77, and the finished steel composite $54.80.

New York, June 4 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute estimates steel production for the current week at 57.4 per cent of capacity, an increase of 1.3 points over the 56.1 per cent at which operations were carried on last week. A month ago production was at the rate of 56.9 per cent of capacity.

$12,940,056 Repaid to Rail Credit Unit

Of the $73,691,368 in loans made by the Railroad Credit Corporation, $12,940,056 has been repaid by borrowing carriers either through cash or credits, up to June 1, 1934, the corporation today reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This leaves $60,751,312 in outstanding loans as of that date.

Upon the loans made to various railroads, $2,155,207 has been paid in interest.

The gross emergency revenues of participating carriers, which were pooled for lending purposes under the Marshalling and Distributing Plan, 1931, amounted to $75,423,722. Of that amount, $15,711,825 has been returned in cash or credits by the Railroad Credit Corporation, leaving a balance of $59,711,897 yet to be repaid.

British Thousands Cheer King George On 69th Birthday

London, June 4 (AP).—Normally stolid British cheered today as their King rode before them in the official celebration of his sixty-ninth birthday anniversary.

He was the honored witness of the traditional "trooping of the colors" with which all his birthdays have been celebrated since he ascended the throne.

"How well he looks," was the comment on every hand.

The ruler was dressed in a scarlet uniform. He wore a huge bearskin shako, and he braved a strong wind and a slight drizzle to ride through crowds of cheering subjects to the celebration. Last year King George was ill with rheumatism and was unable to participate.

A feature of today's ceremony was the participation by foreign military attaches who rode behind the Prince of Wales and the Dukes of York and Gloucester.

Lieut. Col. Cortlandt Parker, military attache of the United States Embassy, was one of those who rode.

The birthday was celebrated as a holiday throughout the empire.

Two for Mulhalls.

Mulhalls exhibited heavy slugging to rout the Hannon Hardware nine in both ends of their Sunday double-header by the scores of 14 to 0 and 15 to 1.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Strange as it seems, dogs not only rescue travelers in the snowbound heights of the mountains—at least one noted Newfoundland devoted his life to searching for and rescuing travelers on the hot, dry wastes of Death Valley. Rufus, the dog of Death Valley, saved 33 lost persons by himself, carrying water to them and leading them to safety. With his master, who also devoted his life to the work of saving lost desert travelers, he saved a total of 360 persons.

A strang incident on the desert caused the man and dog to dedicate their lives to this work. The master, the late Lou Wescott Beck, brought Rufus from Alaska, where the dog was born. While crossing Death Valley with Rufus, Beck got lost and ran out of water.

With an instinct known only to himself Rufus scented the situation and scouted around until he found a water hole to which he then led his master. Beck vowed he would devote his life to aiding similarly stricken travelers.

He equipped Rufus with saddle bags containing water, a neck pouch with snake bite remedies and sent him out to look for lost and stricken travelers. Beck spent his time marking desert trails and was instrumental in getting a Government appropriation of $100,000 for this purpose. When they took stock of their work after 15 years they could say that between them nearly 400 men and women had been saved.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Deductions By Harry J. Tuthill

MY STARS, WHAT AN ODD STORY THAT IS ABOUT DAD...AND THIS MAJOR AMBUSH, AND MONTGOMERY EL DORADO'S SILVERWARE, AND....
PEGGY, YOUR BRILLIANT FATHER HAS BEEN TELLING ME HARUM-SCARUM STORIES EVER SINCE HE GOT WOUND UP ON THAT DETECTIVE AFFAIR.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 6-5
THERE'S THAT ODD-LOOKING MAN NEXTDOOR.... IS HE..?..
YES, HE'S THE OTHER HALF OF THAT DIPPY DETECTIVE BUSINESS. YOU SHOULD HEAR HIM TALK ABOUT "DEDUCTION." YOU'D KNOW INSTANTLY WHY YOUR FATHER LIKES HIM.
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
HIS WIFE SEEMS TO BE QUITE PLEASANT.
SHE'S VERY SENSIBLE, AND I KNOW FROM TALKING WITH HER THAT HER HUSBAND, LIKE YOUR FATHER, INHERITS HIS "DETECTIVE" ABILITY FROM RELATIVES WHO LIVED WITH THEIR WIFE'S PEOPLE WHILE INVENTING SYSTEMS FOR MAKING WATER RUN UP-HILL. THINGS LIKE THAT.
WELL OF COURSE DAD HAS ALWAYS BEEN INTERESTED IN DETECTIVE STORIES.
PEGGY, MOST OF THOSE "SCIENTIFIC" DETECTIVES ARE JUST PLAIN RUBBER-NECKS WHO WANT AN EXCUSE FOR MIXING INTO OTHER PEOPLE'S AFFAIRS, AS YOUR FATHER DID ABOUT THAT EL DORADO SILVERWARE.

Don't Worry.

"You tell me not to worry," said Jabez Jenkins Wright, who just had sold his surrey to get some bones to bite, "and still I keep on fretting, my troubles can't be cured, I find it hard forgetting the losses I've endured. I know it all is idle, and useless and insane, but still I can not bridle the thoughts that give me pain. I know I ought to whistle, I ought to dance and sing, and write a bright epistle indorsing everything. The late financial flurry that left me busted flat is no excuse for worry, I'm well aware of that. But I am built for brooding, for sorrow and for care, I'm helpless at eluding the grip of grim despair. You come to me and tell me that I should laugh to scorn the evils that befell me upon a fateful morn. Go tell the man bald-headed that he should have some hair and have his scalp imbedded in ringlets long and fair. Go tell the sawed-off voter he should be 6 feet high and tell the starving floater to fill himself with pie. Go tell the female beauty she ought to be a man, if she would do her duty, and work out nature's plan. Then come to me and jaw me for being sad and blue, and vainly try to draw me into the smilers' pew."
